IMPORTANT NEWS.

Dispatches from Gens. Grant and Hurlbut to the War Department.

Some Particulars of the Battle at Raymond.

The Capture of Jackson and Burning of the State Capitol.

Reported Abandonment of Vicksburgh by the Rebels.

Their Forces Marched to Livingston, Twenty Miles Northwest of Jackson.

A Supposed Movement to Reinforce Bragg.

REINFORCEMENTS HURRYING FORWARD

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, May 19.

Gen. GRANT, under date of May 11, telegraphed to Gen. HALLECK as follows:

"My force will be this evening as far advanced along Fourteen-mile Creek, the left near Black River, and extending in a line nearly east and west, as they can get without bringing on a general engagement. I shall communicate with Grand Gulf no more, except it become necessary to send a train with a heavy escort. You may not hear from me again for several days."

Gen. GRANT also telegraphed Gen. HALLECK from Raymond, Miss., 14th, as follows:

"McPHERSON took this place on the 12th inst., after a brisk fight of more than two hours. Our loss was 51 killed and 180 wounded. The enemy's loss was 75 killed, (buried by us,) and 186 prisoners captured, beside the wounded.

McPHERSON is now at Clinton, Gen. SHERMAN is on the direct Jackson road, and Gen. MCCLERNAND is bringing up the rear. I will attack the State capital to-day."

The following is a telegram from Gen. HURLBUT, dated Memphis, and received here to-day:

"Gen. GRANT has taken Jackson. The capitol is burned.

From five to ten thousand mounted men are concentrated near Okolona, threatening an advance in the direction of the Memphis Railroad.

A citizen, just up from Jackson, reports that the enemy abandoned Vicksburgh on Sunday, marching on the ridge northeast to Livingston, which is 20 miles northwest of Jackson."

LATER—VICKSBURGH EVACUATED.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, May 19.

Additional information has been received this evening by the President, from Gen. HURLBUT, who has had dispatches from Gen. GRANT, confirming the evacuation of Vicksburgh. The entire rebel force were moving northward, to reinforce BRAGG, for the purpose of attacking ROSECRANS.

The dispatch says they will fail in this, as reinforcements will be thrown forward, not only to intercept rebel movement, but to reinforce ROSECRANS.

REPORTS RECEIVED IN CINCINNATI.

CINCINNATI, Tuesday, May 19.

The defeat of the rebels at Raymond, Miss., is said to have been very disastrous to them. We are yet without particulars.

Gen. GRANT took Jackson on the 14th inst., and burned the State Capitol. Heavy reinforcements were hurrying forward to the rebels, and stopping twelve miles east of Jackson. A great battle is imminent.

ANOTHER INVASION OF KENTUCKY.

A Rebel Force Across the Cumberland Advancing on Richmond.

CINCINNATI, Tuesday, May 19, 1863.

Dispatches from Somerset, Ky., say that the rebel force in Wayne and Clinton Counties is increasing. They are said to have 17,000 men, with 14 pieces of artillery.

Four rebel regiments of infantry have passed through Jamestown, and twenty-four more regiments are reported at Norristown, East Tennessee.

There are rebel pickets on the Cumberland River at every available point.

The Cumberland is falling, and will soon be fordable, unless we have rain.

A letter from Richmond, Ky., says the rebels have crossed the Cumberland and are advancing on that place. There is no question but that another invasion of Kentucky is contemplated with a view to flank ROSECRANS and compel him to leave his strong position at Murfreesboro.

The rebel Gen. S. B. BUCKNER has been assigned to the command of East Tennessee. He is said to be at Clinton.

Twenty-three bodies of the men of the New-Jersey regiment who were drowned have been recovered.

A white man was killed by a free negro in New-Albany on the 17th. The greatest excitement prevailed and the military had to be called out.

LOUISVILLE, Tuesday, May 19.

With the exception of eleven small regiments, under MORGAN, on the south side of the Cumberland River, headquarters here discredit all the reports of rebel forces attempting the invasion of Kentucky, and thinks the dispatches from Mount Vernon, Somerset, and elsewhere come from rebel sources, and designed to prevent the Federal forces from reinforcing ROSECRANS, or invading East Tennessee.

Affairs in Texas.

The New-Orleans Era, of the 7th inst., furnishes the following interesting items of Texan affairs, obtained from a gentleman recently from the vicinity of Galveston:

"The statement recently made, that the Harriet Lane had escaped to sea, without masts, on the night of the 24th of April, we are positively assured, is entirely incorrect. Officers who have been in the blockade service since Jan. 4, assure our informant that, to their certain knowledge, the Harriet Lane is still closely blockaded in Galveston harbor, and that she has been seen and identified by experienced eyes within the past few days.

It is known from various sources that the Lane was badly damaged in the fight on the 1st of January, her shaft being bent to such an extent that it cannot be used, and the rebels have no means of repairing or replacing it. The masts have been taken out, and attempts made to iron-clad her.

The blockade is rigidly kept up, and only a few small vessels and schooners of light draft get out of the harbor. There is sufficient grounds for believing that the Owasco damaged the Harriet Lane after her capture by the rebels.

Affairs at the mouth of the Rio Grande begin to look squally for the swarms of contraband traders. Sickness has already broken out in the fleet of trading vessels, and fears are entertained, and with good reason, that a yellow fever epidemic is close at hand. The business of getting cotton to sea by way of Matamoras is attended with so many difficulties that it is scarcely remunerative."

THE WAR IN TENNESSEE.

The Present Position of the Rebel Army Under Bragg.

Some of Their Troops Moving Westward

MURFREESBORO, Tenn., May 18, 1863.

The situation here is unchanged. The extension of the rebel left to Williamsport has not weakened the heavy infantry force in our immediate front. The three corps of Gens. POLK, HARDEE and BRECKINRIDGE are at Guy's Gap, Wartrace and Hoover Gap, respectively. Gen. POLK's corps consists of Gens. WITHERS' and CHEATHAM'S divisions; Gen. HARDEE'S, of Gens. CLEBURN and MCCOWAN'S; and Gen. BRECKINRIDGE'S, of his own old division under HARDEE, HELM'S, and the reinforcements lately received, forming another division, said to be under command of J. PATTEN ANDERSON.

It is said that Gen. BRAGG has received reinforcements from other points of three brigades; but it is also asserted that the same troops had gone to the aid of Vicksburgh. The forces alluded to are the brigades of Gen. CHURCHILL, just exchanged; Gen. GIST'S, from Charleston, and Gen. WALKER'S, from Savannah. Certain it is that all their troops passed west on or about May 12.

Gen. WHEELER'S rebel cavalry were at McMinnville on the 13th inst. Col. WILDER'S scouts captured eight of his body-guard yesterday, and found documents on them showing WHEELER'S force to be at McMinnville. Gen. MORGAN has had a quarrel with WHEELER, and was under arrest, but has been taken from under WHEELER'S command.

The prisoners taken by Col. WILDER say Gen. MORGAN has moved toward Kentucky, proposing to cross the Cumberland above Carthage. There is a report that he crossed on Friday, but it is not credited.

Gen. WOOD returns to the command of his old division, instead of retaining the command of Nashville, his old troops protesting against his retirement from active command.

The Mobile Register, of the 15th inst., says Gen. BUCKNER has been assigned to the command of East Tennessee, vice DAVIS. There is also a story in circulation that he has been attempting to cross the Cumberland Fork.

It is presumed that forces have lately been thrown into East Tennessee, as Gen. BUCKNER'S rank throws him into command of a division and presumes the retirement of DAVIS. There was only the Seventh Georgia brigade in the Department.

A dispatch in the Atlanta Intelligencer, of May 15, says a fight had taken place at Raymond, Miss., on the 12th inst., in which the rebels under Gen. GREGG had been beaten with a heavy loss. Among the killed was Col. MCGAVERICK, of the Tenth Tennessee.

The newspaper correspondents captured at Vicksburgh on the 3d inst., were in Richmond on the 16th.

NASHVILLE, Tuesday, May 19.

Gen. J. WOOD has been relieved from command at this point and will take command of his division now at Murfreesboro. All is quiet on the front. The river is still falling.

SUFFOLK, Va., Monday, May 18.

To Dr. Gilbert, Medical Director, Fort Monroe:

Dr. HAND started from Cansville, on Saturday evening, with an orderly. They are both missing.

Government Finances.

PHILADELPHIA, Tuesday, May 19.

JAY COOKE, the Government Subscription Agent, reports the sale of $2,050,150 worth of five-twenties to-day, in the following localities: New-York, $875,000; Philadelphia and Pennsylvania, $520,150; Boston and New-England, $475,000; Baltimore, $59,000; Wilmington, $27,000; Delaware, $19,000; Wisconsin, $10,000; Ohio, $62,000; Wheeling Va., $3,000.

It is the expectation of the Treasury Department that small bonds will hereafter be issued in sufficient amounts to meet all subscriptions. They have already made their appearance, and large accessions are promised daily.

Railroad Accident.

SALAMANCA, Cattaraugus Co., N. Y., May 19.

As the Express train on the Atlantic and Great Western Railway, consisting of an engine, one baggage and two passenger cars, was passing over a bridge just west of this station to-day, the bridge parted in about the centre, letting the tender of the engine, the baggage and one passenger car down some fifteen feet to the ground. The baggage car was badly broken up, and the passenger car but slightly damaged.

Fortunately, the small stream which runs under the bridge was very low, the water being about 10 inches in depth. Among the casualties are the following: A news boy named GREENE, killed; C. TOPLIFFE, United States Mail Agent, badly injured in the legs; OLIVER CONEY, baggage master, in the head and chest. Two or three others were slightly bruised. None of the passengers were seriously injured. The damage to the bridge will be repaired and trains resume their regular trips by to-morrow morning.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

Progress of Recruiting for the Negro Regiments.

Meeting in Aid of the Movement.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, May 19.

COLORED SOLDIERS.

It is stated at the War Department, that more vigorous measures for calling out the full military strength of the negroes will be made on Adjutant-Gen. THOMAS' return from the West—that officer, alike from his interest in and familiarity with the subject, is considered peculiarly qualified to assume the entire charge of the organization of negro troops, and his return is therefor awaited before rules and regulations therefor are promulgated. The War Department has already received dispatches from him, announcing the complete organization of eleven negro regiments on the Mississippi. Meantime the prospects for negro volunteering continue brighter. In this city enlistments for the first negro regiment are already complete, and steps are already being taken for the organization of the second. Those interested in the work promise also another regiment from Georgetown, and one, if not two more from Alexandria. The District has thus far furnished but two white regiments. Gen. HEINTZELMAN to-day telegraphed to Gen. SLOUGH, military Governor of Alexandria, asking how many negro troops could be raised there. Gen. SLOUGH replied that he would undertake to raise a brigade, and have them ready for speedy service in the fortifications. From other quarters the indications are not less cheering. Baltimore promises well for at least one regiment, and the southern shore of Maryland for another. Within a circuit of eighty miles around Washington is a population of 160,000 negroes, a large proportion of whom are now within our lines, and available for military service.

MEETING OF COLORED PEOPLE.

At a war meeting of the colored people of this city, held this evening, in furtherance of the organization of a negro regiment, the following resolutions were proposed by W. A. CROPPUT, and unanimously adopted, and a Committee appointed to wait upon the President with a copy of them:

Whereas, The rebel authorities at Richmond, in reply to the announcement by the President of the United States of his intention to employ citizens of African descent in the suppression of the rebellion, proclaimed their determination not to regard such citizens, or their white officers, as prisoners of war, but to subject them to the bloody penalties prescribed in Southern statute-books for persons inciting insurrection among slaves; and,

Whereas, A large number of colored persons, serving in the loyal army as ambulance and wagon drivers, freighters, diggers, servants, &c., either free or those whose freedom was practically assured by the Proclamation of Emancipation, have been captured by the rebels at Murfreesboro, Galveston, Bull Run, Harper's Ferry and elsewhere, and we have every reason to believe impressed or sold into Slavery, no account, as far as we can ascertain, having ever been rendered of such people as military captives; and

Whereas, The failure of the United States Government to guarantee to its colored citizens captured by the enemy the protection to which their military employment manifestly entitles them, has, in our opinion, retarded the enlistment of that class of troops, and seems to have been construed by the enemy into a submission to their threat; therefore

Resolved, That, when all liberty is involved and the existence of the Republic at stake, classes and conditions are sunk in the magnitude of a common cause, and no soldier is so humble or so weak as to be unworthy of the protection of the Government he faithfully serves.

Resolved, That the President of the United States be and he is hereby respectfully but earnestly requested, to declare, in reply to the inhuman threat of the rebels, the adoption of a policy of retaliation; to assert an active guardianship of every enlisted man and every citizen covered by the Federal flag; and to pledge to the nation and the world the whole power of the Government for the protection of all Union soldiers, without regard to color, who may be captured by the enemy, the full rights and immunities of prisoners of war.

The resolutions will be presented to the President to-morrow.

THE CONSCRIPTION LAW.

It is understood that Attorney-General BATES holds that the construction of the Conscription law relieving the Secretary of War from the necessity of accepting $300 in lieu of service from drafted persons is not warranted by the language of the act. Should the President refer the question to him, therefore, it is believed that the common understanding of the $300 clause will be sustained by his decision.

LOSS OF HORSES.

By General Order No. 113, from the War Department, relative to claims for payment for horses and equipage destroyed in the United States military service, compensation is awarded not to exceed $200 for the loss of any horse in battle by death, or abandonment at sea from insufficient forage; from an order to do duty on foot detached from horse, or by the loss of necessary equipage in consequence of such loss of horse.

THE INVALID CORPS.

Col. SACKETT and Medical-Inspector COOLIDGE have been detailed to examine candidates for admission to the invalid Corps.

CONFISCATION.

The property of W. W. CORCORAN, banker, of this city, has been seized under the Confiscation Act. CORCORAN, who has grown immensely wealthy off the Government, is now in Europe, engineering the rebel loan. He is also charged with being concerned in fitting out the pirate "290." The property seized is estimated at over a million dollars.

FRAUDS ON THE PENSION BUREAU.

Extensive frauds on the Pension Bureau have been discovered in the West, and Commissioner BARRETT is expected to investigate the matter during his present trip. Numbers of forged Surgeons' certificates and pension applications have lately been received at the office here. There is plenty of evidence to convict the parties.

DECEASED REBEL PRISONERS.

By official lists received at the Surgeon-General's Office, the number of rebel prisoners who have died in the Union Hospitals since the commencement of the war is shown to be over six thousand.

THE SIGNAL SERVICE.

Acting Chief Signal Officers of departments or armies are authorized by the War Department, their Commanding Generals consenting, to repair here for examinhtion before the Board now in session.

COL. GRIERSON.

Col. GRIERSON is being urged for promotion to a Brigadier-Generalship, in reward for his recent brilliant cavalsy services.

DISPATCHES TO THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, May 19.

THE DIFFICULTIES WITH THE PERUVIAN GOVERNMENT.

The tedious and protracted negotiations for an adjustment of the claims of citizens of the United States on the Peruvian Government, have been brought to an auspicious conclusion. The convention on the subject, including the amendments proposed by our Senate and accepted by Peru, will shortly be published, and the Commission provided by the act of the last session of Congress, to carry the convention into effect, will be organized without unnecessary delay.

ARRIVAL OF PRIZES.

Several prizes have recently arrived at Washington, viz: The schooner Harvest, captured by the steamer Juniata off Charleston, with 84 bales of cotton; schooners Martha Ann and R. Corson, from New-York, with cargoes of whisky, molasses, wagons, furniture, &c., captured near the mouth of the Chesapeake. They were charged with violating the revenue laws, and smuggling goods into Virginia.

THE STEAMER GLADIATOR, BLOCKADE RUNNER.

Reliable information has been received here that the steamer Gladiator sailed from Liverpool on the 25th ult. for Nassau, but ultimately to run the blockade, if possible. Her cargo consists of 1,500 barrels of bread and 1,045 bbls. of bacon—the bacon and bread for the rebel army; and this fact is regarded as an evidence of the great destitution of the rebels, and of the straits to which they are reduced.

GEN. MEREDITH.

Gen. MEREDITH has been relieved from military commission as already stated. It was yesterday reported that he was to take command of the Pennsylvania Reserves, but this is probably a mistake. Gen. HEINTZELMAN, in whose department the division now is, had previously applied for another officer.

EXCHANGED PRISONERS.

Several hundred of exchanged Union prisoners have arrived here. One of them, an officer, states that new and extensive earthworks have been erected on the turnpike road between Richmond and Fredericksburgh, heretofore unknown to us.

Gentlemen returning from day to day from the Rappahannock repeat the story that affairs remain unchanged. Nothing is known with certainty as to the plans for the future.

WOUNDED OFFICERS.

The following is a partial list of officers transferred from the late battle-field near Chancellorsville:

Lieut. P. Kaler, Co. F, 28th Pennsylvania Volunteers—wounded in the shoulder.
Col. J. H. Potter, 12th New-Hampshire Volunteers—in the leg.
Lieut.-Col. G. H. Walker, 14th Pennsylvania Volunteers—in the chest.
Lieut. M. Beahen, Co. C, 8th New-Jersey Volunteers—in the hip.
Col. P. H. Jones, 154th New-York Volunteers—in the hip.
Capt. G. B. Karse, Co. C, —— New-York Volunteers—in the leg.
Capt. J. C. Dow, Co. K, —— New-York Volunteers—in the thigh.

Lieut. J. M. Durgin, Co. B, 12th New-Hampshire Volunteers—in the side.
Lieut. W. W. Weeks, Co. H, 63d Pennsylvania Volunteers—in the chest.
Lieut. J. F. Thomas, Adjutant 20th Indiana Volunteers—in the abdomen.
R. S. Loughery, Co. C, 27th Indiana Volunteers—in the side.
Lieut. P. Eckel, Co. B, 149th New-York Volunteers—in the arm.
Lieut. J. E. White, Co. G, 27th Indiana Volunteers—in the wrist.
Lieut. W. J. McGregor, Co. B, 78th New-York Volunteers—in the foot.
Lieut. W. Hays, Co. C, 84th Pennsylvania Volunteers—in the side.
Lieut. J. S. Williams, Co. G, 63d Pennsylvania Volunteers—in the side.
Lieut. C. Nagler, Co. D, 78th New-York Volunteers—in the hip.

COLORED TROOPS.

Two companies of colored troops were physically examined and mustered into the service to-day.

Incidents of the Late Battles—Our Losses—The Rebel Loss.

From Our Own Correspondent.

STONEMAN'S STATION, Va., Sunday, May 17, 1863.

The incidents and the results of the late battle still fitly serve as the fountain which inspires the pen of the correspondent. Conversation, discussion and inquiry elicit many facts and incidents which deserve to become history.

One of them will illustrate the proximity of the opposing forces, and the murderously close fire of our artillery on Saturday evening. Lieut. DIMMICK, of one of the regular batteries, (afterward mortally wounded,) was pouring heavy charges of canister obliquely across the plank road into the enemy's ranks. An officer rode up to him in the darkness, and ordered him to change the direction of his fire. "By whose order?" said Lieut. DIMMICK. "By the order of Gen. STUART," responded the officer. "You are my prisoner," was the reply, and the discomfited rebel Staff officer surrendered.

The rebel loss in general officers is the greatest they ever suffered in any engagement. The loss of the rank and file must have been proportionately as great, and fully justifies the assertion of Gen. LEE, that "it is very severe." Two more such battles will destroy that army, and that is what Gen. HOOKER is after—the rebel army, and not the rebel capital.

Our own loss of general officers in these battles is less than usual—Maj.-Gen. BERRY killed, Brig.-Gen. WHIPPLE mortally wounded, and Brig.-Gens. MOTT and DEVENS severely wounded.

Two live lords, officers in the British service, arrived at headquarters yesterday. They are Lieut.-Col. CROWDER, from New-Brunswick, and Lieut.-Col. Lord ARDINGER, of the Scots Fusileer Guards, from Montreal. They were dined and wined by Gen. HOOKER, in the afternoon, and are engaged in seeing what kind of material our army is composed of. Before they leave they will doubtless get a more enlarged idea of American institutions, resources and enterprise than they have heretofore possessed. I am informed that they made a good beginning, in this respect, yesterday.

Naval.

GENERAL COURT-MARTIAL.

A general Court-martial convened at the Brooklyn Navy-yard yesterday, for the purpose of trying the Executive officer of the United States steam gunboat Sumter, on a charge of having neglected to keep an officer on watch on his vessel during the night on which the safe was stolen. The following are the officers of the Court: Commodore ROWAN, Capt. ROE and Capt. ORLANDO. The evidence taken yesterday shows that Capt. WINCHESTER distinctly ordered the accused to keep an officer on watch every night. We understand that Capt. WINCHESTER has been detached from the Sumter, partly at his own request.

GRAND FETE ON BOARD THE IRON-CLAD ROANOKE

Yesterday, a grand fête was given on board the iron-clad frigate Roanoke, at the Navy-yard. A large number of guests were invited—among others, Miss HARRIET LANE, Mrs. Judge ROOSEVELT, and several French and Spanish officers. The band of the North Carolina discoursed good music.

The final trial of the Roanoke's machinery was resumed after the party left, and when it is over, the question whether or not the shaft will have to be removed will be decided. Last evening the engines were working admirably, although not making as many revolutions as could be desired. Several of the best Engineers attached to the station are witnessing the trial.

MORE ABOUT STONEWALL JACKSON.

Rebel Views of Vallandigham's Arrest.

Richmond papers of May 14, which have been transmitted to us by our correspondents, furnish us additional interesting extracts.

FROM FREDRICKSBURGH.

Correspondence of the Richmond Examiner.

FREDERICKSBURGH, May 12, 1863.

The Northern horde has returned to its lair opposite Fredericksburgh, but how changed its circumstances! Baffled, dispirited and broken, its humiliated condition cannot be concealed. Jaunty officers, on gaily caparisoned steeds, are no longer seen careering over the Stafford Hills. The long lines of regiments, with glittering arms and flaunting colors, have vanished, and the banging of drums and clangor of trumpets which, before the recent battles, filled the air morning and evening, are heard no more. Huddled behind the hills, they tremblingly fear lest the Army of Northern Virginia shall, in its exultation, make a descent upon their demoralized columns, and complete the work of destruction so happily commenced. Night before last an incident occurred which exhibited their nervousness. A party of Mississippians undertook to haul a seine in the river, near Knox's Mill. The Yankees concluded that the Rappahannock was being crossed by the Confederate army, and at once the heavens were illuminated with their rockets, the picket lines were doubled, and their whole camp gave every indication of fearful apprehension. Fallen Joe, however, was permitted to pass the night unmolested by the seine-haulers.

Speaking of HOOKER reminds us that his fall is the heaviest of all the unfortunate Generals of the Army of the Potomac. None bragged more high than he, and a future Plutarch will only find his parallel and perfect prototype in JOHN POPE, his predecessor.

The conduct of the enemy in Fredericksburgh, during their recent occupation, deserves a paragraph. It was not marked by the general destruction which occurred in December last, but, nevertheless, there was a vast amount of vandalism and wanton outrage committed in this city. About 50 of the best private houses were appropriated as hospitals for their wounded. Among the devoted number was that of your correspondent, and the condition in which he found it is a fair illustrations of the treatment which all received. The rooms were sacked from garret to cellar, and everything that could be eaten drank or carried off was gone. The contents of the library were torn up and trampled under foot, and the pictures, engravings, and even the portraits, cut from their frames and destroyed. The furniture was all marred and mutilated, and blood covered the walls and clotted the floors. Dying men and dead bodies lay in every room, with here and there a pile of amputated limbs. Fifteen or twenty feet from the door, the graves of four Captains and a Major gave variety to the limited landscape of the back-yard, and afforded a comforting suggestion of swift and righteous retribution, though a home and its garden had been converted into a charnel-house and graveyard.

The wanton desolation of these houses, the arrest of a few citizens, and the stealing of every horse and mule that could be found, sum up the second series of Fredericksburgh's misfortunes. Among the citizens arrested and sent to Washington, was Mr. JOHN F. SCOTT, who volunteered to assist your correspondent in taking notes of the battles, and being caught, in the fluctuations of the battle, within the enemy's lines, was unable to extricate himself. He was swooped up here last Summer and committed to the Old Capitol Prison, and on his release was very active and efficient in procuring the exchange of civilian prisoners from the Richmond jails, in return for Virginia gentlemen confined in Washington. His kind offices in this regard will be remembered by many, and doubtless reciprocated on this occasion of opportunity.

The usual monotony of the camp here has been varied, during the past few days, by flags of truce, for the purpose of sending to Gen. HOOKER the wounded he left behind him in his rapid retreat. There is one notable fact respecting these miserable wretches. Nine-tenths of them are Irish or Dutch, while the prisoners are, for the most part, Yankees.

Our army is quietly resting from its labors. The result of the recent engagements has inspired the men with fresh courage and confidence, and the Summer campaign bids fair to prove a harvest of glory.

STONEWALL JACKSON.

From the Richmond Examiner, May 14.

All the poor honors that Virginia, sorely troubled and pressed hard, could afford her most glorious and beloved son, having been offered to his mortal part in this capital, the funeral cortège of the famous JACKSON left it yesterday morning, on the long road to "Lexington, in the Valley of Virginia." It was the last wish of the dead man to be buried there, amid the scenes familiar to his eyes through the years of his manhood, obscure and unrecorded, but perhaps filled with recollections to him not less affecting than those connected with the brief but crowded period passed upon a grander stage. This desire, expressed at such a time, demanded and has received unhesitating compliance. Yet many regret that his remains will not rest in another spot. Near this city is a hill crowned by secular oaks, washed by the waters of the river identified with what is great in the State's history from the days of ELIZABETH to the present hour, which has been well selected as the place of national honor for the illustrious dead of Virginia. There sleep MONROE and TYLER. We have neither a Westminster or a Pantheon, but all would wish to see the best that we could give conferred on JACKSON. Hereafter, Virginia will build for him a stately tomb, and strike a medal to secure the memory of his name beyond the reach of accident, if accident were possible. But it is not possible; nor is a monument necessary to cause the story of this man's life to last when bronze shall have corroded and marble crumbled.

Then, after sketching his career in the United States army, the Examiner notes some incidents which transpired while he was a Professor in the Virginia Military Institute, as follows:

"His services were not conspicuous here; Col. GILHAM was considered as the military genius of the school, and THOS. JACKSON was but little thought of by the small nero-worshippers of Lexington. The cadets had but little partiality for the taciturn, praying Professor. He was stern in the performance of his duty. At one time his life was threatened by a cadet dismissed from the Institute—the wild boy actually going to the extremity of laying in wait for him on the road leading from the Institute to the village. As JACKSON, in his accustomed walk toward the village, approached the spot where his enemy awaited him, a bystander called out to him of his danger. 'Let the assassin murder, if he will,' replied the Professor, as he walked, in the most unconcerned manner, toward the young man, who slunk abashed from his path.

Perhaps none of the acquaintances of JACKSON were more surprised at his brilliant exhibition of genius in this war than those who knew his blank life at the Institute, and were familiar with the stiff and uninteresting figure that was to be seen every Sunday in a pew of the Presbyterian Church at Lexington. But true genius awaits occasion commensurate with its power and aspiration. The spirit of JACKSON was trained in another school than that of West Point or Lexington, and had it been confined there, it never would have illuminated the page of history.

In the early periods of the war, JACKSON, commissioned Colonel by the Governor of Virginia, was attached to Gen. JOHNSTON'S command on the Upper Potomac. At Falling Waters, on the 2d of July, 1861, he engaged the advance of PATTERSON, and gave the Yankees one of the first exemplifications of his ready-witted strategy, as PATTERSON never knew that, for several hours, he was fighting an insignificant force, skillfully disposed to conceal their weakness, while JOHNSTON was making his dispositions in the rear.

The first conspicuous services of JACKSON in this war were rendered at Manassas in 1861; although the marks of active determination he had shown on the Upper Potomac, and the affair of Falling Waters, had already secured to him promotion to a Brigadier-Generalship. The writer recollects some paragraphs in a Southern newspaper expressing great merriment at the first apparition of the future hero on the battle-field. His queer figure on horseback, and the habit of setting his chin in his stock, were very amusing to some correspondents, who made a flippant jest in some of the Southern newspapers of the military specimen of the Old Dominion. The jest is forgiven and forgotten in the tributes of admiration and love which were to ensue to the popular hero of the war. JACKSON spoke his first immortal words at Manassas, when he stayed the retreat of forces just as it verged on irretrievable disaster. 'They are beating us back,' said another General. 'No, Sir,' replied JACKSON, as his eyes blazed with a victorious courage. 'We'll give them the bayonet.'"

The expedition to Winchester, the operations in Shenandoah Valley when BANKS was driven back, and the part which he took in the campaign against POPE, are sketched in detail, and the writer concludes as follows.

"The participation of JACKSON in the campaign of Maryland and that of the Rappahannock shared their glory, but without occasion for observation on those distinct and independent movements which were his forte, and for the display of which he had room in the Valley campaign and that against POPE. The manner of his death on the field of Chancellorsville has already been related. He bore his wounds and the pain of his disease without a murmer, and among the low, intelligent words of the noble sufferer, were the recognition of the hand of God in his destiny, and the remark that even his wounds were 'a blessing he would not part with,' since Providence must have given them for some wise and good purpose.

Finally his mind wandered back, in the delirium of approaching dissolution, to the scenes of the battle. He again gave the word of command, uttered words of encouragement to regiments staggering under fire, ordered his Commissary to hasten on with needful food to exhausted troops. Almost the last sentence was the order he had so often given in life, 'A. P. HILL, prepare for action.'

The accounts given of Gen. JACKSON'S appearance are varied. Many could see nothing great in his form or face. But those are they who hold to the stage idea of a hero. JACKSON'S face was not cadaverous; he did not roll his eyes about; nor wear long, greasy, black curls over his shoulders. But experienced observers of men do not hesitate to declare that they have recognized him among a crowd of other officers as the only man there who could be JACKSON. He was a muscular man, six feet high, of a clear white complexion, blue gray eyes, sharp aquiline nose, a prominent chin set on a powerful and well curved jaw. The skull was magnificent in size and shape; the forehead both broad and high, and balanced by a long, deep mass behind and above the ear."

THE ARREST OF VALLANDIGHAM.

From the Richmond Examiner.

When the late Federal Congress was engaged in passing the three laws which converted the President of the United States into an absolute monarch, the stock phrase for the country signified a total disbelief in the practical exercise of the powers conferred. The laws were scarecrows; they were powers given to the President to be held in terrorem over the rebels and the disaffected. Such is the invariable coating of the pill of usurpation. We have heard such phrases from some Southern lips, to excuse the projects of laws which have happily never been passed in the Southern Confederacy. The sudden imprisonment and probable sentence of death on Mr. VALLANDIGHAM, for simply condemning the "policy" of his Government, show how much these phrases and such apologies are worth. Arbitrary powers are never inert. No hand is too nerveless to clutch a sceptre, and make its weight felt on the backs of kneeling slaves. A nation that barters its liberty to accomplish a temporary purpose, will surely find that the payment in full will be enforced without mercy or delay.

If sympathy for an individual and an enemy were permitted, sorrow for the fate of Vallandigham would be felt by most men of heart in the South. Vallandigham, Pierce, and one or two other citizens of the United States, have displayed the highest courage, and the most honorable patriotism amid the wild wickedness of their country. They will hold, in the history of their times, a place not less respectable than that allotted to CHATHAM and BURKE, in the parallel story of the war between England and the Colonies. But we are not sorry that the event has at last occurred. It marks a new chapter. Now commence the measures of terrorism, by which LINCOLN and his party can only reign till the sure step of retribution overtakes them. It was the wise remark of the present Emperor of the French (made before he was Emperor, and when he wrote for newspapers,) that arbitrary Governments invariably perish by the operation of the identical measures which they invented to extend their power and defend their existence. The Government of LINCOLN will fall by its own sword. Terrorism may do for a while in France what proscription did in old Rome. But the success of any expedient in Rome or France is proof presumptive that it will fail in England or America. No portion of the Anglo-Norman race, however degraded and depraved, will long abide the loss of one privilege which they have hugged to their souls since they were savages in the woods—the great privilege reasserted in all their charters, that no freeman—"Nullus liber homo"—shall be imprisoned, banished or put to death, except by the jury of his peers. "nullus liber homo"—uncouth words," said the elder PITT; "sounding poorly in the ears of scholars, these three words are worth all the classics."

ANOTHER PRIZE FIGHT.

Orem and Geoghegan the Contestants—Nineteen Rounds Fought in Twenty-three Minutes—A Forced Decision in Favor of Geoghegan—Arrests by the Police.

At an early hour yesterday, a fight between J. CON OREM, of Colorado renown, and OWEN GEOGHEGAN of this City, took place at South Amboy, in Middlesex County, N. J. A large party left the City Monday night in the Keyport boat to witness the encounter, also many persons took private conveyances for the same object. The steam-tug John Tracy was chartered by a certain number of individuals, and at 2 o'clock yesterday morning left Jersey City and proceeded toward the fighting ground, reaching it at about 6 o'clock A. M. The boat, however, struck the bar, where she was held fast, and in order to reach land the passengers were obliged to take to a small boat—the only one on board—which made several trips back and forth. The people in the vicinity of the spot where the ring was pitched were greatly incensed at the proceedings, and notified the Sheriff of the County, who endeavored to prevent the anticipated fight, but failed in consequence of not having a sufficient number of men to aid him. The ring was pitched at about sunrise, and was considered one of the firmest that has been put up since the recent fighting-season commenced. All the available points for seeing what transpired within the ring were monopolized by the Geoghegan party, and the betting, as a general thing, was decidedly in that individual's favor. The party assembled, with some few exceptions, seemed determined that OREM should not be the victor, no matter how successful he might be in whipping his antagonist. As the appointed hour for the fight approached, the crowd became very noisy and boisterous, and one rowdy even went so far as to fire a barn which contained a considerable quantity of hay.

KIT BURNS and "PADDY" acted as seconds for OREM, Mr. MULLEY being his umpire; and HOLMES and DONNELLY for GEOGHEGAN, SCAMMELL as umpire. OREM weighs 142 pounds, is 27 years of age, and has not much of the pugilistic aspect about him. GEOGHEGAN weighs 138 pounds, is 22 years of age, and is unqualifiedly plain-looking. As the principals were about to proceed to "business," Sheriff CLARK stepped out, and notified the crowd of the illegal nature of their work, reading the laws of New-Jersey upon the subject. OREM said that he wished to violate no law, and would leave if the rest did so. GEOGHEGAN replied that he came there to fight, and if OREM did not fight in the ring he would lick him on the spot. OREM replied that all he wanted was a fair show. He was without friends, but asked no favors. All the while the crowd,

MESSAGE FROM HIS HONOR THE MAYOR.

The following Message was received from His Honor the Mayor, returning unapproved the resolution increasing the salary of the Public Administrator to five thousand dollars per annum:

MAYOR'S OFFICE,
NEW-YORK, May 15, 1863.

To the Honorable the Board of Councilmen:

GENTLEMEN:

I must return, unapproved, the accompanying resolution, increasing the salary of the Public Administrator of this city to the sum of five thousand dollars per annum, such increase of salary to date from the first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three.

This is an increase from one thousand two hundred and fifty dollars, the amount at which this officer's salary was fixed nearly fifty years ago, and were that amount his only compensation it would seem to be not unreasonable to increase it, in view of the seven-fold increase of the population of the City since the time of fixing the salary, and the consequent augmentation in the amount of the important duties imposed upon the Public Administrator. But in addition to the salary there are costs and allowances from the estates of decedents which I have been informed constitute a large addition to the income of this officer. If that additional income is not so large as has been represented, and a change in the amount of salary is proper, the increase to five thousand dollars per annum seems to me unwarrantably large.

An argument, which has been strongly urged on behalf of the proposed increase, is that the Public Administrator is the head of a bureau in the Law Department, and that as the head of another bureau in that Department receives a salary of five thousand dollars per annum, he also should receive a similar salary. I do not deem it safe to act upon such a principle, as to do so would frequently make one bad precedent the occasion of much other equally improper action.

As is well-known to your Honorable Body, I have been and continue to be opposed to the increase of salaries at the present time, especially to such large amounts as that proposed in this case; believing, as I do, that a period when our public burdens are necessarily so heavy, by reason of the war now being waged for our national existence, we should endeavor to observe the strictest practicable economy in every item of municipal expenditure; and that no salary of a public officer should be increased, unless it is so small as to render it difficult to support his family at the enhanced cost of living. This exception does not apply to the present case.

GEORGE OPDYKE,
Mayor.

Which was received, directed to be entered at length on the minutes, laid on the table for ten days, and published in the Corporation papers, under the direction of the Clerk.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

Telegrams from Gen. GRANT to the War Department give a brief statement of his movements up to the 14th inst., and announce that he intended to attack Jackson on that day. Telegrams already published have announced the capture of that place, on the day indicated by Gen. GRANT. It is announced to-day that he burned the State Capitol—it probably being used as a rebel depot for supplies. Gen. HURLBUT, in telegraphing this intelligence from Memphis, gives the report of a citizen just arrived from Jackson, that the rebels abandoned Vicksburgh on Sunday last, marching on the ridge northeast to Livingston, which is twenty miles northwest of Jackson, and about midway between the Big Black and the Pearl Rivers. Gen. GRANT states that Gen. McPHERSON captured Raymond on the 12th, after about two hours' brisk fighting. Our loss was 51 killed and 180 wounded. The rebel loss was 75 killed and 186 prisoners, beside their wounded. A dispatch from Cincinnati states that ..forcements for the rebels were being hurried forward, and were stopping twelve miles east of Jackson. The Pearl River is between them and Gen. GRANT, however.

The War Department last night received another dispatch from Gen. HURLBUT, confirming the previous reports of the evacuation of Vicksburgh by the rebels. The supposition is that they are trying to effect a junction with BRAGG, or to cooperate with him in an attack on Gen. ROSECRANS.

A dispatch from Cincinnati informs us that the rebels are threatening another invasion of Kentucky. News from Somerset is to the effect that a rebel force in Wayne and Clinton Counties is increasing—numbering already 17,000 men, with fourteen pieces of artillery. A letter from Richmond states that they have already crossed the Cumberland, and are advancing on that place. The movement is supposed to be intended to flank Gen. ROSECRANS, and to compel him to leave his position at Murfreesboro. Gen. BURNSIDE, however, will no doubt be able to attend to it in a satisfactory manner.

The rebel raiders in Western Virginia were heard from on Sunday at Burning Springs, Wirt County, where they burned the oil works, inflicting heavy losses upon Mr. JOHNSON CAMDEN, Judge THOMPSON'S son-in-law, and several other persons. They still threaten Parkersburgh, of course. It is told the Wheeling Intelligencer as a fact, that when the rebels were at Morgantown it was agreed in Waynesburgh, Penn., that no defence of the place should be attempted, and moreover, that JESSE LAZEAR, M. C. and Cashier of the bank there, went out eight miles with a flag of truce hunting somebody to surrender the town to, but found nobody after long and diligent search.

A private note from Washington furnishes the Evening Post the following as trustworthy information: "No movement is likely to take place on the Potomac for some time. Gen. HOOKER has been left to follow his own plans, with the assurance of not being interfered with. Gov. CURTIN, of Pennsylvania, has offered to raise 50,000 volunteers to man the fortifications of Washington, and the proposition is understood to have been accepted. Advices received at the Navy Department from the fleet in the Mississippi, express the opinion that Vicksburgh must very shortly be ours."

Col. BAXTER SMITH, of the rebel army, his Adjutant, WM. A. CARUTHERS, and three others, were captured by a detachment of our forces on May 9, at a private house, near Carthage, Tenn., the late residence of Hon. ABE CARUTHERS.

Gen. E. B. BROWN, who was wounded in the battle at Springfield (Mo.) on the 8th of January last, has recovered from his injuries and is ready to take the field. His left arm, which was struck by a musket ball, is partially crippled.

On Thursday, Gen. DIX met with an accident by being thrown from his horse. The animal, falling upon his right leg, ... bruised it, but fortunately no bones were broken, and the General is already able to walk.

The U. S. steam transport George Peabody, Capt. ATWELL, arrived at this port last night from New-Orleans 10th inst., and Key West 17th, bringing 200 soldiers of the Eighth U. S. infantry (exchanged prisoners from Texas) and 40 steerage passengers. She brings no news from Key West. Her news from New-Orleans has been anticipated by the steamship George Washington, arrived here on the 17th.

GENERAL NEWS.

At the meeting of the Board of Supervisors, yesterday, a message was received from the Mayor, vetoing a resolution auditing and ordering to be paid certain bills for materials furnished for the New Court-house, on the ground that the work was ordered by the New City Hall Commissioners, who should certify the claims. The Mayor also doubts the legality of the claims in the County Tax law for 1863, giving this Board the right to build the Court-house, because the purport of the clause is not embodied in the title of the law, as required by section 16 of the State Constitution; but upon this point he is seeking legal advice. The message was referred to the New Court-house Committee, with instructions to consult the Corporation Counsel in the matter. Another message was received from the Mayor, vetoing the resolution authorizing the Harlem Bridge Committee to settle the question of the boundary line between this County and Westchester County, so far as it concerns the ratio of expense upon the two counties for building the new bridge, on the ground that the boundary question, being a matter of geographical fact, should be decided only by accurate surveys, and not by agreement. Mr. PURDY said the Mayor had misapprehended the purpose of the resolution, which was not to set at rest the troublesome boundary question, but simply to determine how much Westchester County should pay toward building the bridge. A communication from the Comptroller, proposing a transfer of $12,333 36 from the County contingent fund, to pay adjudicated claims for work ordered by the Record Commission, was referred. Bills for work on the new Court-house and materials furnished, since the Board resumed charge of its construction, and amounting to upwards of $100,000, were ordered to be paid. Adjourned to 3 P. M. on next Tuesday.

A prize fight between OREM and GEOGHEGAN took place yesterday morning at South Amboy, N. J.—nineteen rounds were fought in twenty-three minutes. It was alleged that OREM struck a foul blow, and in order to force the referee to decide in favor of GEOGHEGAN a loaded revolver was presented at his head. Shortly after the party had separated, forty arrests were made by the Police.

On Sunday night, Gov. PEIRPOINT disbanded the Fourth and Fifth regiments of the Virginia State Militia, which then returned to Wheeling, after an unsuccessful excursion in pursuit of the rebel marauders.

Surgeon RICHMOND and Captains FERRALD and PLANT, who were detailed to inquire into the circumstances of the casualty on the Cumberland River, by which 33 members of the 27th New-Jersey Volunteers lost their lives, have reported as follows: "After a careful and thorough investigation of the matter, in all its connections, they announce it as their united opinion, based upon the evidence elicited from parties who were on the boat at the time of the occurrence, and their own personal observation from the bank of the river, that the deplorable disaster was undeniably the result of an unforeseen accident, over which no one had control, and that no blame, therefore, can be justly attached to any person."

The newspaper correspondents who were captured while trying to run the rebel batteries at Vicksburgh on a tug, were at Jackson, Miss., on May 6, en route for Selma, Alabama.

In the Court of Sessions, yesterday, FERDINAND WEBER was tried for larceny from his employer, and acquitted. MICHAEL SULLIVAN pleaded guilty to an assault upon THOMAS HAYNES, and was fined six cents.

The Stock market yesterday reacted against the extreme advance of Monday, to the extent of 3 @5 ₩ cent. in the forenoon, but later in the day recovered part of the decline and left off firm. Money active at 6 ₩ cent. Gold ¼@½ ₩ cent. and Exchange 1 ₩ cent. lower than on Monday. The Subscriptions to the United States Loan of 1882, amounted in this City to $1,013,800.

Breadstuffs opened rather briskly and buoyantly yesterday, but closed heavily. Provisions were in more request. Groceries were generally quiet. Whisky was dull and heavy. Cotton was partially neglected. Hay, Tallow and Petroleum were in good demand. Most other articles were lightly dealt in. The freight market was less active. The auction sales of dry goods passed off with a fair degree of spirit and success, considering the lateness of the season.

The Live Stock Markets, so far as numbers are concerned, appear scantily supplied this week, but with a light demand there is scarcely any deficiency, and had all the stock which was intended for the present market reached the City, there would have been a large surplus. With the first fair supply of fresh vegetables there is a falling off in the demand for meat. Eggs are now claiming a large share of public patronage as a cheaper food than beef.... Beeves number 3,906, or 400 less than last week. From 800 to 1,000 head were kept back for want of cars on the Erie road, else there would have been an overstock. Prices ruled high on Monday, but fell off somewhat before the close—Tuesday P. M. Taken as a whole, prices were higher than at any previous market this year, the average being 11½c. Several droves were sold at 12c. ₩ lb. for the estimated net weight of the four quarters, and those were poor animals which did not bring 11c. The prospect of more cattle on Thursday, when the detained droves are expected, induced some butchers to buy lightly now.... Sheep are plenty and ½c. lower, although only 5,283 are reported for the week. Good sheep, with their fleeces still on, are worth 8½c., and 6c. if shorn. Lambs are bringing $4 50@$7 each. ....Live hogs number 9,600, and are selling at 4½c.@4¾c. if corn fed, and 4¾c. if still fed.

The Copperhead Indignation Meeting.

We have not had this many a day a more ridiculous demonstration than that of the Copperheads at Union-square in protest against what they call the "intolerable tyranny at Washington." We doubt, indeed, whether there ever was a more absurd assemblage of blatherskites. There, in the face of sober citizens returning home from their business, they stood by the hour ranting against the National Government for stifling free speech—belching out invective, vituperation, ribaldry, execration, threats and defiance; howling sentiments that, if acted upon, would be outright murder and treason; shrieking like very sybils possessed; outroaring Boanerges; and all because the despot LINCOLN had gagged the country. We wonder what the sensations of a Frenchman, fresh from his own land, or a Prussian, would have been, had he been passing about that time of day. His bewildered ideas would probably have settled down into one of two conclusions: either that there was a very curious custom in the United States of giving the inmates of Lunatic Asylums an airing about sunset, or that the Americans, like SWIFT'S people of Brobdignag, had some remarkable powers of utterance, unheard of elsewhere, and that, if they could make such noises when gagged, their regular hullaballoo, with mouths free, must be something that would really frighten the man in the moon, and that it was really a mercy in the ruler of the country to keep them—gagged.

A precious set of martyrs, indeed, they are. Says MCMASTERS: "Freemen, how are you to save your liberties? By fighting. Yes, if necessary, by fighting." Says MCCUNN: "In eighteen months this country will be too hot for the men who are now hounding and hunting out those who advocate the liberty of free speech and a free Press." Says MULLALY: "The men in Washington are like the British tyrants in the time of the Revolution." Says RYNDERS: "War is waged here by military despots upon the rights and privileges of American people, worse than the war that is now waging in the South. It is for us to fight for our liberties here." Says THARIN: "Step by step had ABE LINCOLN departed from his promises, until by gradations of infamy he sat on a kingly throne and aspired to a regal crown." Says BIRDSALL: "Were VALLANDIGHAM arrested here the whole population would rise en masse to rescue him." Says MASON: "Every one of the acts of the Administration indicate the purpose of the Administration to terminate our liberties;"—and so on indefinitely. There was hardly a sentiment uttered through the whole meeting that might not and would not, have been applauded in Richmond. The fellows were brimfull of sympathy with the rebels, and gave themselves full swing. They hissed, and groaned, and swore, and shrieked, and raved against President LINCOLN to the top of their bent, and not a Provost-Marshal, nor a soldier, nor a police officer, nor any mortal being in the City lifted a finger to save the public sense of decency, nor thought of it for an instant; and yet they continued all the same, tearing on like madmen against the insufferable rule of the usurper and despot.

We don't wonder that the Copperheads of any note, who had any public character to take care of, kept aloof from the preposterous exhibition. The variety of their excuses sent in by letters is amusing. RICHARD O'GORMAN had "professional engagements;" HENRY C. MURPHY had "previously-formed engagements;" OAKEY HALL had "an imperative and unexpected out-of-town engagement;" NELSON J. WATERBURY had "a severe cold;" AMASA J. PARKER had "a state of voice," &c.; WASHINGTON HUNT found it "quite out of my power;" CHARLES INGERSOLL had "an engagement for Monday evening;" F. O. J. SMITH was "unable to attend in person;" SANFORD E. CHURCH had "imperative engagements for next week," and so on to the end of the list. WOOD and BROOKS, the two Tycoons of the party, were not on the ground, neither did they send any sign. The political howlers who managed the affair were unhandsomely left in the lurch by nearly the whole array of the advertised speakers. Whether this general reluctance of the Copperhead leaders to participate in the meeting came from objections to its object, or to the stuff of which it was composed, does not yet appear.

The President of the United States has too much self-respect, and too much respect for the office he fills, to be moved a hair's breadth from his proposed line of action, whatever that may be, by the insults and the browbeating of a meeting like this. The men who figured in it were sufficiently disqualified from exercising any legitimate influence by their undisguised rebel sympathies and peace principles. Not one of the resolutions they adopted contained a syllable directly or indirectly in favor of the war against the Confederacy. But when, superadded to this renegade spirit, abuse and menace are indulged in that would disgrace the lowest canaille of the vilest city in Europe, nothing else is possible but the most absolute contempt. For the voice of the true people, we believe President LINCOLN will ever be eager to listen. Every loyal man in the country who has an honest conviction against either the justice or the expediency of carrying out the sentence of this military Court may fitly declare it. We are confident that no President we ever had would more respectfully defer to calm and deliberate public opinion than the one who now occupies the Executive chair. But he will look for this opinion in the proper direction. He will not be discomposed, for an instant, by the ribald exhibition, or deceived by the despicable sham, at Union-square. He will yield to reason, but to blackguardism or to hypocritical pretense—never.

The Question of Generalship.

There is a passage in KINGLAKE'S Invasion of the Crimea, describing the character of Sir COLIN CAMPBELL, the present Lord CLYDE, which we may read just now with some profit, inasmuch as there is no theme which at this moment so much interests us as the exact nature of the qualities which are needed to make up a good General, and there is no theme which we discuss so much. When the war began, the inexperienced public very naturally were possessed by the notion that a great leader must, above all things, love fighting; that he must have for it a certain amount of ardor, which will make him seek it whenever it holds out a fair promise of a satisfactory result. This notion was held down to the battle of Bull Run. After that memorable engagement, however, it fell into complete disrepute. The idea of subduing the South by hard knocks was scouted as the dream of fanatics and visionaries, and people became possessed with the idea that the proper way to overcome the rebels was, as Sam. Weller would say, to "circumwent" them. The "anaconda plan," therefore, came into high favor. The revolted States were to be encircled with "a wall of steel and fire," and, after a while, the revolt was to be extinguished by mere process of compression, or strangulation, with little or no actual combat.

Even when it began to be apparent that it was no easy matter to encircle half a continent with a wall of even baser and less costly materials than "steel and fire," and that even if the wall were made, the rebels might refuse to die quietly inside of it, and might now and then break it down, the popular faith in fighting was not revived. We still clung to the notion that if the "anaconda" did not succeed, "strategy" certainly would do the work; "strategy" being understood to mean a series of movements which would eventuate in such despair on the part of the rebels, that they would throw down their arms without firing a shot. At this period MCCLELLAN'S star was at its meridian. The nation looked on with mingled awe and admiration at the marches and countermarches, and intrenchments, of which that General's operations were made up, and was firmly satisfied that they were driving JEFFERSON DAVIS to distraction. It was supposed that in some mysterious manner, best known to our chief, the arch rebel received a stab in his vitals every time a Union brigade shifted its position. It was believed that doubtless the traitors wished to get us to fight, but that we were a great deal too knowing to be tempted into gratifying them. They were to be manœuvred into destruction, and we were to wake some fine morning, and find that the Confederacy had disappeared, leaving behind a strong odor of brimstone.

We have at last, after much tribulation, got back again to the old creed, that for war there must be fighting, and a great deal of it, and that the result of campaigns, under the ablest Generals that ever lived, must depend in the main upon the capacity of the opposing forces to give and take hard blows. Manœuvering is, after all, but a means to an end. Its object is not to do away with battles, but to give armies favorable positions to fight in; and manœuvre as we may, the battle must come eventually to crown the work. No abler manœuvrer than the First NAPOLEON has ever existed, but to every one of his marches except one, there was a bloody sequel. The only occasion on which he compelled a large force to surrender without fighting, was when MACK laid down his arms to him at Ulm with 40,000 men. What he could not accomplish with his wonderful power of calculation and combination, it may be safely said that it is useless for the ordinary run of Generals to attempt.

What KINGLAKE utters is, therefore, a wholesome truth, that we shall henceforward do well to remember:

"A bodily ardor for fighting may be more or less masked and hidden; but he to whom this great passion is wanting is without the quality of a General. For warfare is so anxious and complex a business, that against every vigorous movement heaps of reasons can forever be found; and if a man is so cold a lover of battle as to have no stronger guide than the poor balance of the arguments and counter arguments which he addresses to his troubled spirit, his mind, driven first one way and then another, will oscillate, or even revolve, turning miserably in its own axis, and making no movement straight forward."

The perfect General is the man who has this "love of battle" in combination with rapidity of conception, great powers of calculation, and that intuitive sense of the value of positions and superiority of forces, which has been happily called the "military instinct." But a man may have all these last-mentioned qualities, and yet, if he have not "love of battle," they are worse than useless, because they help him to cheat the nation he tries to serve into a false dependence on him. Stonewall JACKSON possessed this "bodily ardor for fighting" in a very high degree, and he managed, moreover, to communicate it to his men. The result was that, though he never commanded an army, he contributed more than any other General in the rebel service to every one of our reverses; and he is probably the only man who has appeared in this war, on either side so far, who has won for himself a place in history as a military leader of the first rank.

Maryland, Kentucky and Missouri.

It is curious to mark the effect that the war has produced upon the three great border Slave States—Maryland, Kentucky and Missouri. These three States, at the beginning of the rebellion, had a perfect identity of interest, and a perfect identity of feeling. They were all largely slaveholding; Slavery was the dominant interest in each, next to real estate; and the exports of each were mainly the products of slave labor. Their active and enriching trade was based on the slave system, so that, so far as the exciting cause of the war was concerned, Maryland, Kentucky and Missouri were almost as much Southern and slave-bound as Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi.

Kentucky and Missouri had another and a peculiar complication with the revolted States that Maryland did not have. The trade of the two former was almost entirely with the South. The vast surplus product of Kentucky farms, which consisted of horses, mules, hogs, corn, hay and hemp, found its natural market on the plantations of the Cotton States. And Missouri sent South the great bulk of her flour, corn, hemp and iron manufactures. Secession was absolute death to the current trade of Kentucky and Missouri, unless those States went with the South. In addition, it should be remembered that the social intercourse between Kentucky, Missouri and the South was quite as intimate as their commercial relations. The confluent waters of the great valley—the Missouri and the Ohio Rivers uniting with the Mississippi, and the three flowing to the Gulf together—seemed to mingle the blood of all the people living on their banks. Kentuckians and Missourians were as familiar and almost as numerous in Mississippi, Arkansas and Louisiana as natives of the soil. And so they mingled together, intermarried and became practically one, in blood as well as in mode of life, in feeling and in interest. Maryland never had the same identity with the Southern States—had much less commerce and intercourse with the Gulf States, and should have felt less intensely the sympathies of secession, but yet was warmly inclined to the South.

Notwithstanding the facts as we have put them, and the immense preponderance of the social and slave interest in Maryland, Kentucky and Missouri turning the balance toward the seceding States, these three States deliberately resolved to abide by the Union. This decision has been maintained steadfastly, against powerful internal forces working for the rebellion, in the midst of a ruined commerce, a disorganized agriculture, and a demoralized slave population, under the pressure of frequent rebel invasions, at the muzzle of cannon and at the point of bayonets. Surely it would seem to be proved that Maryland, Kentucky and Missouri loved the Union ... than blood, property or life.

These three States have lost every interest that centered in Slavery—the products of slave labor, the commerce built thereon, and the value in money of the slaves themselves. In Missouri a man had almost as well offer to sell crows on the wing as the souls that were lately chattel slaves. In Maryland the valuation put on slaves has reached the vanishing point. Their sum as property is nil. We saw lately a statement to the effect that the inventory of a deceased slaveholder's estate rendered by his executor estimated this class of property as low ... head. And there was nothing to attribute this loss of value to but the effects of the present war upon Slavery in Maryland, and the resulting policy of emancipation in the District of Columbia.

In Kentucky the condition of things is but little better for the slave interest. These facts are unquestionable, and they are without remedy. Slavery is absolutely dead in Maryland and in Missouri. It has its death-wound in Kentucky, but it is dead and stinks in Maryland and Missouri. How do the three States respectively accept the doom of the Institution? Each in a widely different spirit. Singular to say, while the three were united in sentiment in all the preliminaries of the rebellion, and have been united in the progress of the fight, each differs from the others in acceptance of the result to Slavery.

Missouri, with the prompt decision and energy of the West, says "Slavery is dead—henceforth it cumbereth the ground—take it hence from my borders." Kentucky, with the hopefulness and patience of a conservative trying to restore herself and the nation to the old order of things, says: "Let Slavery alone—it is not dead, but with peace and the Constitution it will revive again." Maryland—"my Maryland"—with the pride and stoicism of a high-born dame bereaved regretfully of her domestic ally, admits the death, but repels all sympathy and all aid to bury the departed, and says: "Leave me alone with my dead!"

Who does not see that Missouri alone pursues the course of true wisdom. Hers is the philosophy of life. Her people obey the laws of the Creator, who bids all "move on" in the destiny marked out for the human race.

Kentucky is not so wise as Missouri; but the spirit of Kentucky is entitled to respect. It is not plain to her people that Slavery is extinct in her borders. But Kentucky is slow, steady and conservative, and her breast lies alongside the Cotton States, and feels the pulse of Slavery beating quite strongly.

The course of Maryland is most unphilosophical of all, and most unaccountable of all. She admits that the institution of Slavery is dead, but will not leave its side, or have it consigned to its proper charnel-house. The slave part of her social fabric has fallen in ruins, and now confessedly obstructs her progress in population, enterprise, and wealth; but Maryland refuses to remove the débris of the wreck, and mourns as a foolish one for what can never return. Maryland may say of Slavery as David said of his dead son by Uriah's wife: "I shall go to him, but he shall not return to me." Maryland may remain infatuated, may refuse to let her dead Slavery be buried, and may linger and die with it, and go to its place—but Slavery "shall never return" to her. Is it becoming, is it wise, is it noble for a proud State to lie down thus in the valley of dry bones, while the world is marshaling and marching on in the pathway of freedom, civilization and renown?

The Speech of a Patriot.

We copy in another column a speech recently made in Kentucky by JOHN J. CRITTENDEN, who has been nominated by his constituents for reëlection to Congress. We commend it to general attention—not because all its opinions will command universal assent, but because its leading sentiment is one which should animate the heart and guide the conduct of every man who loves his country better than he loves the petty schemes of party or the political prejudices and prepossessions of his own judgment. Mr. CRITTENDEN is the sole survivor now in public life of the generation of great men who made public service glorious by the splendor of their talents and the fervor of their patriotism. With increasing years and experience his devotion to the welfare of his country has become more and more conspicuous; and now, in this crowning hour of her peril, he gives men of all parties the timely and useful example of one who stands ready to sacrifice prejudice, party relations, the opinions and convictions of a life-time even, to the preservation of the Union and the salvation of the country.

Mr. CRITTENDEN has differed from the Administration upon many very important features of the policy it has adopted. But he wastes no words in useless and mischievous denunciation of its course:—he gives the Government, in spite of these differences, the most earnest and hearty support. With his strong and vehement prejudice against the employment of negroes as soldiers, very few persons out of the Slave States will sympathize: many, indeed, will treat this prejudice as an impeachment of his patriotism. They would do much better, and prove themselves truer patriots, by imitating his sacrifice of sentiment to principle and his devotion to country as paramount to everything else. He shares with many men of the Democratic party in censuring alleged infringements on the part of the Government upon personal and individual rights:—but he does not imitate them nor follow their lead, in striving to make these infringements the basis of a partisan crusade and magnifying their importance to the serious detriment of the public good.

Mr. CRITTENDEN sees in the rebellion the terrible peril that overhangs the country and threatens the Government with ruin. He knows that the nation can be rescued from that danger only by war—vigorous, earnest, persevering and successful war, and he is therefore for prosecuting that war, under all circumstances, in victory or defeat, whether he approves or censures the specific policy of the Administration, until the rebellion is quelled and the supremacy of the national Constitution is fully restored. This is the true platform—the only one upon which the country can be saved from destruction, and the one, therefore, on which we hope to see the great mass of the people of the loyal States thoroughly and heartily united.

VICKSBURGH.—Gen. HURLBUT, commanding at Memphis, sends, in an official dispatch, the statement of a "citizen," who reported to him that the rebels had abandoned Vicksburgh on Sunday last, and were marching to Livingston, a place 30 miles northeast of Vicksburgh, and 20 from Jackson. We do not know whether the citizen's statement was based upon hearsay, actual observation, or imagination. We do not know anything of the citizen's character—his reliability, sagacity, or political proclivities. Consequently, we are at a loss to know what value to put upon his report.

It would neither astonish us if his statement prove true nor if it prove false. Considering the points that have been seized and held by Gen. GRANT, we should think that Vicksburgh was nearly untenable. But considering that the lowest Northern estimate of the Vicksburgh garrison has been 30,000 men, which was augmented a few days ago by the brigades carried in by Gen. JOHNSTON, we should not be astonished if the rebels attempted some deep game of strategy aganst Gen. GRANT. At all events, we are left in doubt just at the culminating and critical moment of the perilous and exciting campaign against Vicksburgh. The consolation is, that we cannot be left in doubt very long.

WORK FOR GEN. BURNSIDE.—We hope that now that Gen. BURNSIDE has disposed of Mr. VALLANDIGHAM, he will at once proceed to pay attention to the heavy force of rebels which, as we learn from the West, have invaded his Department. The dispatch which we publish this morning from Cincinnati, where Gen. BURNSIDE'S headquarters are located, announces that seventeen thousand rebels, with fourteen pieces of artillery, have made their appearance in the southeastern part of Kentucky on the Cumberland River, and that twenty-eight additional regiments of rebels are at Norristown, East Tennessee, evidently with the purpose of joining their strength to the aforementioned 17,000. It is said these immense forces are moving upon Richmond, Ky., from whence they will advance toward the northern and middle parts of the State, with a view to flank ROSECRANS and compel him to retreat from Tennessee.

These are very large statements—quite as large, we suspect, as the invading rebel force. But there seems to be no doubt that some rebel soldiers have suddenly appeared in Southern Kentucky. We have a small force, under an able officer, on the Cumberland River; but that officer has lately been in such ill-health as to be compelled to be temporarily absent from his command. If anything like the army of rebels mentioned have appeared, we should be inclined to fear that they would gobble up our detachment on the Cumberland. But Gen. BURNSIDE will now doubtless bestir himself.

THE NEW AMERICAN ACADEMY OF SCIENCES.

Its Plans, Purposes and Aims.

The "National Academy of Sciences," organized in accordance with an act of last Congress which we give below held its first session in this City one month ago; but it was thought unadvisable by the Association that reporters for the Press should be admitted, and the Secretary agreed to furnish for publication such minutes as he thought advisable, which was done yesterday.

NATIONAL ACADEMY OF SCIENCES.

The first meeting of this Association was held on the 22d of April, in the Chapel of the University of the City of New-York. Hon. HENRY WILSON, of Massachusetts, to whose exertion the passage of the act of incorporation is mainly due, called the meeting to order in a brief address, the main points of which were as follows:

GENTLEMEN: I hold in my hand the Act, passed in the closing hours of the Thirty-seventh Congress, "To incorporate the National Academy of Sciences." This Act, under which you have met to organize, incorporates in America, and for America, a National Institution, whose objects, ranging over the illimitable fields of Science, are limited only by the wondrous capacities of the human intellect. Such an institution has been for years in the thought and on the tongue of the devotees of science, but its attainment seemed far in the future. Now it is an achieved fact. Our country has spoken in no halting in that dark and troubled night of its history, and commissioned you, gentlemen to mould and fashion its organization, to infuse into it that vital and animated spirit that shall win in the boundless domains of science, the glittering prizes of achievement that will gleam forever o'er the brow of the nation.

This Act of incorporation may not be—is not—perfect. The task has been one of difficulty and delicacy. The number of members must be limited, while the most eminent men of science must be recognized, and sectional claims harmonized. If unintentional injustice has been done to any one, if mistakes have been made time will, I trust, correct the injustice and the mistakes. Omissions will surely come. "Death is in the world," and that eternal sieve, honored names will not remain long unchosen in it men of merit have been forgotten in this Act of Incorporation, the Academy should seize the first and every occasion to right the seeming wrong.

This Academy is destined, I trust, to live as long as the Republic shall endure, and to bear upon its roll the names of the savans of coming generations. Let it in advance high its standard. Let it be as inflexible as justice, and as uncompromising as truth. Let it speak with the authority of knowledge, that profession may sink abashed before it, and merit everywhere turn to it, confident of recognition.

Prof. JOSEPH HENRY, of Washington, was then elected Chairman pro tem., and Prof. CASWELL, of Providence, Secretary. The following resolution was then passed unanimously:

Resolved, That the Academy accept the act of Incorporation, and hereby declares its intention of entering with earnestness and devotion upon the high course marked out for it by Congress.

Another resolution thanking Mr. WILSON for his action in the Senate in behalf of the Academy was then passed.

A Committee of Nine was then appointed to draft and report a plan of organization. The organization finally adopted is, in its main features, as follows:

1. The class of Mathematics and Physics.
2. The class of Natural History.

The corporate members elect under which of these two classes, and in which section of that class, they will inscribe their names. The classes are subdivided thus:

A. CLASS OF MATHEMATICS AND PHYSICS.—Sections 1. Mathematics; 2. Physics; 3. Astronomy, Geography and Geodesy; 4. Mechanics; 5. Chemistry.

B. CLASS OF NATURAL HISTORY.—Sections 1. Mineralogy and Geology; 2. Zoology; 3. Botany; 4. Anatomy and Physiology; 5. Ethnology.

While each member chooses his own position, he may also be elected an honorary member of any section by the members thereof, and the Academy retains the power of transferring a member from one section to another.

There may be fifty foreign associates who take no part in the business of the Academy, but have the privilege of attending its sessions, reading and communicating papers, and of receiving a copy of the publications of the Academy.

The officers of the Academy are a President, a Vice-President, a Foreign Secretary, a Home Secretary, and a Treasurer, all of whom are elected for a term of six years.

There is also a Chairman and Secretary to each class, elected annually at each January meeting. The officers of the Academy, and Chairman of the classes, together with four members to be annually elected by the Academy, constitute a Council for the transaction of such business as is assigned to them by law or by the Academy.

The powers of the President (or, in case of his absence or disability, the Vice-President,) are to preside at the meetings of the Academy, name (unless otherwise provided by law) Committees of members, referring business, experimental inquiries, investigations or preliminary inquiries required by the Government of the United States or its branches, to members specially conversant with the subject; and, with the Council, to direct the general business of the Academy. The duties of the other officers present nothing beyond what is usual in all similar organizations.

The Academy holds two stated meetings in each year—one in January and one in August. The January meeting is to be held always in Washington, on the 3d day of January, (or, when that day is a Sunday, on the 4th;) but the August meeting will be held at such place as the Academy at any previous meeting designate, and on the 3d Wednesday of the month. The scientific meetings of the Academy are to be open or public, the business meetings closed. Communications by persons not members of the Academy are to be presented and read by a member, who makes himself responsible only for the general propriety of the paper, and not for opinions expressed by the author.

Propositions for researches, experiments, observations, investigations or reports, shall originate with the classes to which the subjects are appropriate, and then be submitted to the Academy for discussion, and approval or rejection, excepting propositions from the Government of the United States, or any of its branches, which shall be acted on by the President, who will, in all such cases, report, if necessary, at once to the Government, and also to the Academy at the next stated meeting. The judgment of the Academy is to be at all times at the disposition of the Government upon any matter of science or art within the limits of the subjects embraced by it. The President of the Academy is competent, in special cases, to call in the aid, upon committees, of experts, or men of remarkable attainments not members of the Academy.

The annual report to be presented to both Houses of Congress is to be prepared by the President of the Academy, and before its presentation is to be submitted, first to the Council, and then to the Academy, at the January meeting. The abstract of a memoir may be sent by any member to the Home Secretary, to be printed and circulated among the members during the recess of the Academy.

These are the most important features of the organic law of the National Academy of Science. An election was held under the rules, when the following officers were chosen almost unanimously:

President—Alexander Dallas Bache, Washington, D. C.
Vice-President—James D. Dana, New-Haven, Conn.
Foreign Secretary—Louis Agassiz, Cambridge, Mass.
Home Secretary—Wolcott Gibbs, New-York.
Treasurer—Fairman Rogers, Philadelphia, Penn.

OFFICERS OF THE CLASSES.

Class A, Mathematics and Physics—Chairman, B.

Pierce, Cambridge, Mass.; Secretary, B. A. Gould, Cambridge, Mass.

Class B, Natural History—Chairman, B. Silliman, New-Haven, Conn.; Secretary, J. S. Newberry, Ohio.

Representatives in Council—Admiral C. H. Davis, Lewis M. Rutherford, Dr. John Torrey, Prof. J. P. Lesley.

After the completion of the organization, each member present, agreeably to the requirements of the organic law, took the oath of allegiance prescribed by the Senate of the United States for its own members, and in addition thereto took an oath faithfully to discharge the duties of a member of the National Academy of Sciences to the best of his ability.

The President then read a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, asking the Academy to prepare a report upon the subject of Weights, Measures and Coinage, both domestic and international. A resolution of thanks to Chancellor FERRIS, for the use of the rooms in the University Building, was passed unanimously, and the Academy adjourned to meet in the City of Washington on the 3d of January, 1864.

THE ACT OF INCORPORATION.

The act of Incorporation is as follows:

Damages by the Recent Powder Explosion.

The Committee of the Board of Aldermen appointed to investigate and appraise the damage caused to houses and furniture by the recent powder explosion on the East River, between Seventy-seventh and Seventy-eighth streets, visited that locality yesterday morning, to inspect the losses occasioned by that affair. The damage caused by the monster explosion surprised the Committee, being far greater than they had conceived. They first visited the residence of Mr. T. C. KEYES, at the foot of Seventy-sixth-street. Here the scene presented was quite astonishing, the buildings giving every possible evidence of wreck and ruin. Fences were prostrated and out-buildings more or less demolished. The main damage, however, was to the house occupied by Mr. KEYES' family, and the furniture in it. Not a room in the house escaped the ravages of the terrible concussion. The eaves and coping of the roofs and piazzas were ruthlessly torn off, tin leaders were broken up as if they had been but pipe-stems, the sidewalks were cracked more or less throughout, ceiling walls had tumbled down everywhere, and furniture was broken up indiscriminately, doors, blinds and sashes had been torn away from their places, and forcibly thrown against opposite walls and windows, house timbers were wrenched from their strong joints and panes of glass were broken without limit. In short, the building is so torn and racked that it will be impossible to restore it to its former strength. The tremendous concussion played some curious freaks. Mr. and Mrs. KEYES, who were reading in their bedchamber at the time, were hurled across the room, fortunately with only slight bruises. The marble-top of a large parlor table, standing in the centre of a room, was broken in two, while a large vase on the top of it was unbroken; the cornices of rooms were considerably cracked and smashed, while pictures on the walls were not in the least harmed; a piano and the water tank of a bath-room were taken from their places and tumbled over and over, while lamps were taken from mantels and tables to the floor without damage. Lace curtains were torn to shreds, chairs were broken, some pictures were scratched and cracked and others were left untouched by harm; cartridges, inclosed in boxes, were thrown promiscuously into various parts of the house, and it seems a miracle that life itself did not meet with destruction.

The neighboring houses of Messrs. Dr. LAWRENCE and NATHANIEL HUSTED, and the Jones Wood Hotel, kept by Mr. SOMERS, presented somewhat similar scenes, although nothing like so much damaged as was Mr. KEYES' place, which was the first building west of the locality of the combustion, and therefore suffered most. A brick was hurled through the side of Mr. HUSTED'S house, across a large room, and out on the other side, making a hole in its passage very like the aperture which might be made by a cannon ball.

The houses referred to are, in domestic parlance, "upside down," everything within them looking as if the occupants were preparing to move away, instead of getting resettled in their own homes.

The damage to Mr. SOMERS' hotel was chiefly by the breaking of glass, although the walls are more or less crushed and marred.

It is said that Messrs. JOUNSON & DOW, who owned the magazine which exploded, are not in a financial condition to be made responsible for these damages, and that, therefore, the corporation is liable, the magazine having been located where it was by the permission of the Mayor. It is also said that the magazine was used as a storehouse for powder, and that the proprietors realized at least $10,000 a year by storing powder for other parties. If this can be proved to be true, and that it was known to the residents of the vicinity, it will go considerably toward lessening the strength of the claims for damages, as they made no complaint of the fact to the Mayor or Common Council. It is also reported that there is a powder magazine located in the Central Park, in which the powder used for blasting in the Park is stored. If this be true, the danger probably will not exist long, as it is very probable that the Common Council will soon repeal the ordinance permitting the storage of powder in the City, in quantities above the contents of a keg.

Anniversary of the Brooklyn Young Men's Christian Association.

The sixth anniversary of the Brooklyn Young Men's Christian Association was celebrated with appropriate ceremonies last night at the Lafayette-avenue Presbyterian Church, Rev. T. L. CUYLER, Pastor, corner of Oxford-street and Lafayette-avenue.

After preliminary religious exercises, the President, WM. O. VINCENT COFFIN, Esq., announced that the annual report would not be read as usual, because it had been presented at their monthly meeting, and had been published.

Rev. T. L. CUYLER was then introduced, and as pastor of the church, extended to them a cordial welcome, and as a member and laborer of the Association spoke of its good work, especially that which it was now doing in the army. He thought the salvation of the country depended upon keeping the moral standard of that army good.

Mr. G. H. STEWARD, President of the United States Christian Commission of Philadelphia, next addressed the meeting. He spoke of the origin of Young Men's Christian Associations, and gave their history, together with affecting incidents connected with the same. He told of the commencement of the United States Christian Commission, which was established in 1861, and stated that they now had 538 delegates scattered about in the army. It would really do them good to visit their rooms, and see how expeditiously they did things. It took only a few minutes to equip an emissary, and send him wherever his services were needed. In conclusion he read a letter from a Brigadier-General, who had formerly been a President of an Association, in which the writer spoke of their services, and advocated the raising of negro regiments, which he stated, when prejudice was overcome, were found to be the bravest, the most serviceable and religious soldiers of any in the army.

Mr. STEWART was followed by Rev. S. H. TYNG, of this City, who made a few humorous remarks, and suggested that a collection be taken up to assist the Association in their work, which was done accordingly.

The meeting soon afterward separated.

Postponement of the Trial of the Police Commissioners.

The trial of the Police Commissioners, or rather the investigation of the charges against them, which was announced to commence to-day, has been postponed, in consequence of the District Attorney not having yet obtained a copy of the papers necessary for him to proceed with the investigation.

STAGE ACCIDENT.—Persons who witnessed a stage accident yesterday, at the corner of Madison-avenue and Thirty-first-street, are referred to advertisement elsewhere in our columns.

DEAFNESS
NOISES IN THE HEAD,
Diseases of the Eye, Ear & Throat,
CATARRH CURED
BY
DR. VON EISENBERG.

Author of "Surgical and Practical Observations on the Diseases of the Ear, with his new Mode of Treatment."

NEW TESTIMONY.

"NEW-YORK, May 6.

I was entirely deaf in my left ear, accompanied by a discharge. I placed myself under Dr. VON EISENBERG'S care, who, by his great skill restored me to perfect hearing, in the short space of a few minutes, without giving me the slightest pain, and the discharge has ceased entirely. The Eustachian Tube, which was obliterated, is quite open, and I feel that the air-passage performs its functions. I am amply satisfied, and recommend every one suffering from impaired hearing to place themselves under the treatment of this eminent and successful physician.

THOMAS GRANAN, No. 539 6th-av."

"NEW-YORK, May 7, 1863.

I have great pleasure to testify to the skill of Dr. VON EISENBERG. I went into his office almost completely deaf, and came out with my perfect hearing. It is nearly twelve months since, and the hearing is perfect. The operation, which lasted two or three minutes in each of my ears, gave me no pain whatsoever. I, with confidence, recommend all sufferers to place themselves under Dr. VON EISENBERG'S unsurpassing skill.

SAMUEL C. HUNT,
No. 6 Meserole-av., Greenpoint, L. I."

WEST HOUSTON-ST., NEW-YORK, Feb. 9, 1863.

I have been completely deaf in one ear, and partially so in the other, for above seventeen years, with a disagreeable discharge from both ears, connected with continual rumbling noise in the head, for which I have been treated by a most eminent practitioner in the City without the slightest relief.

I consulted Dr. Von Eisenberg, but I must candidly say that I had no faith in his success when I did so. It is, therefore, due to Dr. Von Eisenberg to acknowledge that I am entirely cured; also, that he displayed that skill and knowledge which have procured for him such an unrivaled reputation. As I have had an opportunity of comparing his mode of treatment with that of others, I can truly state that it is not only superior, but the principles which direct his mode of restoring the hearing are, in my opinion, certain.

JOHN TAYLOR.

NEW-YORK, July 19, 1862.

This certifies that my mother has been for some time afflicted with partial deafness, suffering from pain, and rumbling noises in the head, together with other indications of a total loss of hearing. Dr. Von Eisenberg removed from her ears a great quantity of matter, together with coagulated blood, relieving her instantaneously, and all without pain. It is with grateful thanks that I give this testimony to his skill.

CARROLL J. POST, No. 28 South-st.

No. 188 MERCER-ST., NEW-YORK.

J. E. VON EISENBERG, M. D.—Dear Doctor: I have been afflicted with total deafness, and was induced to pay you a visit. No one can imagine my delight when, after one operation, my hearing was suddenly, and without pain, restored to me, for which I feel very grateful. After being totally deaf—almost shut out from the pleasure of using so necessary a sense—to have it returned, and to hear so distinctly, reflects great credit on you for the immense amount of skill you possess. I beg to thank you for what I can so truly appreciate. I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

EDWARD TEMPLE HARRISON

CHRONIC CATARRH CURED.
READ.

NEW-YORK, March 20, 1863.

"This is to certify, that I have suffered from very severe CHRONIC CATARRH, with a dull heaviness in the head. I felt my nose completely stopped up accompanied by continual soreness of the throat, the chills stealing over me with occasional hot flushes, a great tightness of the chest and pain, so much so, that every one thought it was consumption. Having heard of the great cures performed by Dr. Von Eisenberg, I consulted him with but little hope of a cure. I am now happy to be enabled to add my testimonial to the great number already in the Doctor's possession, as to his scientific and successful mode of treatment, as he has shown in my case that skill and knowledge which have procured for him so great a reputation. I am so entirely restored to perfect health that I do most sincerely recommend all sufferers from CHRONIC CATARRH and SORE THROAT to apply at once to Dr. Von Eisenberg with a certainty of being cured."

TWO NEW AND IMPORTANT BOOKS, TO BE PUBLISHED THIS WEEK,

I.

PARIS IN AMERICA.
By LABOULAYE.
Translation by Miss MARY L. BOOTH. 1 vol., 12mo. 374 pages. $1 25.

Rev. Dr. McClintock, writing from Paris, says:

"All Paris is laughing and Americans rejoicing over Laboulaye's new book—its delicate irony, its sharp razor-cuts of sarcasm, &c. It is having an extraordinary run—two editions have been exhausted in a fortnight."

The N. Y. Evening Post says:

"Seldom have drollery and instruction been so happily blended. The dialogues in which his characters engage are marked with nice sense, sound wisdom, as well as biting wit."

From "Malakoff," Correspondent of the N. Y. Times.

The author deals such hard blows at certain high dignitaries in France, that one is astonished at not seeing the book seized by the police. It is an important and most entertaining book.

SCRANTON COAL AT AUCTION.

OFFICE OF THE DELAWARE, LACKAWANNA AND WESTERN RAILROAD CO., No. 35 WILLIAM-ST.,
NEW-YORK, May 11, 1863.

In continuation of the system of monthly auction sales, this Company will offer, at public auction, on WEDNESDAY, 26th day of May, 1863, at 12 o'clock noon, at the room now used as the Merchants' Exchange, Nos. 26 and 28 Exchange-place, corner of William-st., by SIMEON DRAPER, Auctioneer,

THIRTY THOUSAND TONS OF FRESH MINED SCRANTON COAL,

embracing all the usual sizes, and deliverable at their depot, Elizabethport, N. J., after the 1st of June next. They will repeat such auction sales on or about the 20th of each month, during the year 1863.

The sale will be positive. Each lot put up will be sold to the highest bidder; no bids, in any form whatever being made for account of, or on behalf of the Company.

Fifty cents per ton, in bankable funds, to be paid at the time and place of sale, and the balance in like funds, on receiving the order for the coal, which must be called for within 10 days thereafter, and the coal taken away within 30 days from the day of sale, unless navigation is obstructed. Buyers who wish, however, can have an additional 5 days for taking the delivery of their purchases, by making a further deposit of 50 cents per ton, within 10 days above specified. Interest, at 7 per cent. per annum, will in such case be charged on the balance, from the time stipulated for payment until paid; and 25 cents per ton to cover the expense of stocking the coal—both to be paid on delivery of order.

The other conditions of sale will be substantially those hitherto accepted by all purchasers, by private contract, of coal deliverable at Elizabethport, so far as applicable. The coal will be delivered direct from the cars on their arrival from the mines, when practicable—otherwise from the stock. These conditions will be modified to meet the wants of ocean steamers, whose arrival cannot be definitely fixed.

With a reliable avenue from the Lackawanna and Wyoming Valleys to tide-water, open every day in the year (Sundays excepted), requiring but 12 hours for the transit of the trains, the advantages of such sales, and the superior condition in which the coal will be delivered, are so apparent, they cannot doubt this mode of selling will commend itself to the favorable consideration of both the trade and consumers, whose cooperation is respectfully invited.

MAGNIFICENT COLLECTION OF MODERN PICTURES.

HENRY H. LEEDS & CO. will sell at auction, on THURSDAY and FRIDAY EVENINGS, May 21 and 22, at 7½ o'clock each evening, at the Dusseldorf Gallery, No. 548 Broadway, over Dr. Chapin's Church—

MAGNIFICENT COLLECTION OF MODERN PICTURES,

Being the richest and most costly assemblage of works of art we have probably ever had the pleasure of offering, consisting of ORIGINAL specimens by artists of distinction in various countries, selected by a gentleman favorably known in the art world for the last thirty years, and of which a large portion were purchased when in Europe from the exhibitions of the seasons of 1848, 1850, 1856, 1857 and 1860, and others painted to order for the collection.

The Gallery contains the productions of several artists of whom examples, owing to their rarity and high cost, have never before been offered here, among which will be found the chef d'œuvre of Florent Willems, "L'amour et la Fidelite," one of the most beautiful specimens of pre-Raffaelite art.

A "Breton Interior," the prize picture of Theodore de Heuvel. The "Hamlet," by Hamman, the finest known picture of Van de Sander Bakhuyzen, (recently deceased at the Hague,) called the "Forest Side," and to which Verboeckhoven added the figures. A cabinet specimen by Adolf Dullens, &c.

The Dusseldorf School is represented by a rare work by the inimitable fruit painter, Preyer; also, by paintings of Leutze, Vautier, Camphausen, Boettcher, Forster, Meyerheim, Hagel-stein, Zimmerman, &c., &c.

The French School by examples of Compte, Calix, F. Willems, Fauvell, Tesson, Veron, Pecrus, Lanfout de Metz, Phillipeau, Cerier, &c.

The Dutch School by numerous specimens by Schelfhout, Verschuur, Louis Meyer, Van Grootveldt, Eversen, Koek Koek, Terlack, Van Hove, Van Moer, Spokier, Bakhuyzen, Reyntjens, Walraven, Kruseman, Leickert, Riegens, Vanberg, Akkersdyke, Bliders of Utrecht, Vervoer Scheeres, Ten Katen, Herrebart, Roseboom, &c.

Among the Belgian artists represented are Verboeckhoven, (two specimens of the first class,) Hamman, Raffaien, Dillens, Mme. Ronner, Mme. Senezcourt, De Noter, Robbe de Beni, Serrure, De Heuvel, Von Seben, Verwee, Smets, Serling, Correns, Wauters, De Jonghe, Maswyn, Vidal, Janssens, &c.

The English portion of the collection is unusually rich in specimens of great beauty (many of them exhibition pictures) by Sidney R. Percy, H. J. Boddington, Baxter, Collett, Passmore, George Cole, Arnefield, Newell, Burt, E. C. Williams, Walter Williams, Pelham, Shayer, Pinton, Barland, Beattie, Charles Dukes, E. C. Barnes, &c., &c.

Also, several rare examples by American artists, including "Washington Crossing the Delaware," by E. Leutze, being the second and smaller picture of the subject, and the one from which the fine engraving was taken in 1856; Cropsey, Gignoux, Sully, Hays, Tait, Eastman, Johnson, G. C. Lambdin, Shattuck, Bingham and Sontag.

Together with several choice pieces of marble statuary.

They are now on exhibition as above, free, with catalogue, and we would recommend lovers of the fine arts to pay an early visit to the collection, the opportunity for examining it at their leisure being then probably more favorable than toward the close of the exhibition, when the rooms are more crowded.

PRIVATE DISEASES CURED IN THE shortest possible time, by Dr. WARD & CO., No. 50 Lispenard-st., near Broadway, without the use of Mercury, loss of time or change of diet. Dr. WARD, from the hospitals of London, Paris and Edinburgh, is the discoverer of the only certain and reliable remedies for diseases of a private character. In 28 years' practice he has cured more cases of Secret Diseases and Wrong Treatment than all others combined. I can and will cure you in less time and expense than any one can or will, and those who have been robbed of their money and health, call; it will take but little money and time to restore you. If you have been unfortunate, call at once. By his special experience in this much neglected branch of medical science, he is enabled to guarantee a cure in the most complicated cases. Recent cases of Gonorrhœa or Syphilis cured in a few days, without change of diet or hindrance from business. Secondary Syphilis—the last vestige eradicated without the use of Mercury. Involuntary emissions stopped in a short time. Sufferers from Impotency, or loss of sexual power, restored to full vigor in a few weeks. Permanently and speedily cured by a new treatment. Persons at a distance failing to receive prompt treatment elsewhere, may get a permanent cure effected by writing a full diagnosis of their case, addressed to Dr. WARD, No. 50 Lispenard-st., the only place. Call, send or write.

SURE CURE—BY DR. POWERS, SUCCESSfully consulted with Dr. WARD, No. 50 Lispenard-st. Thirty years of extensive practice, exclusively devoted to the treatment of those complaints enable us to effect cures in cases where others of less experience have failed. Dr. Powers' Essence of Life restores the vigor of youth in four weeks. This marvelous agent restores manhood to the most shattered constitution—physical disqualifications, impediments to marriage, thereby speedily cured. The most to consult, Drs. Ward and Powers, the champions and kings of venereal diseases, possessing the most certain, speedy and only effectual remedies in the world, guarantee a perfect cure, or no charge, in from one to three days. Established in 1840. N. B.—Those who have used their preventives are never without. Send for a circular. To Ladies.—Dr. Powers' Periodical Drops are a safe and certain remedy for monthly irregularities. The above remedies sent by mail. The afflicted should read their circular. DRS. TRALL & JACKSON'S "PATHOLOGY OF THE REPRODUCTIVE ORGANS."—"This is really a scientific work of great practical value. All other works on the subjects discussed in this volume, that have fallen under our observation, are addressed, mainly to a prurient taste, and are positively pernicious."—Chicago Tribune. "This volume is full of scientific information of incalculable benefit in the cure of disease."—New-Bedford Mercury. "It is unquestionably the most complete, the most sensible and the most valuable work of its kind yet published."—The New Yorker. "It offers judicious advice to suffering humanity, which will save thousands from complicating their afflictions by resorting to quack doctors and empirical treatment."—Boston Journal. "It is the only work in existence containing directions which will positively CURE that distressing disease termed spermatorrhœa, and other sexual diseases which cause so much misery to the human family."—Boston Express.

PRIVATE CONSULTATION.—DR. HUNTER has, for thirty years, confined his attention to diseases of a certain class, in which he has treated no less than fifty thousand cases, without an instance of failure. His great remedy, HUNTER'S RED DROP, cures certain diseases, when regular treatment and all other remedies fail; cures without dieting or restriction in the habits of the patient; cures without the disgusting and sickening effects of all other remedies; cures in new cases in less than six hours; cures without the dreadful consequent effects of mercury, but possesses the peculiarly valuable property of annihilating the rank and poisonous taints that the blood is sure to absorb, unless his remedy is used. That is what he claims for it, and what no other will accomplish. Its value in this respect has become so well known, that scientific men in every department of medical knowledge begin to appreciate it, for hardly a week passes that he is not consulted by druggists, chemists and physicians, in regard to some pitiful patient who has exhausted the whole field of the faculty, and still the disease will appear. Its popularity is so great, that there is not a quack doctor in the City that has not attacked it; and when they find their lies are not so easily swallowed, they then pretend that they can make it. It is $1 a vial, and cannot be obtained genuine anywhere but at the old office, No. 3 Division-st. Book for 15 three-cent stamps, 100 pages, 100 colored illustrations. The best work out.

A LOYAL AND PATRIOTIC SPEECH.

Speech of Hon. John J. Crittenden, at Lexington, Ky.

TO THE PEOPLE OF THE SEVENTH CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT.

FELLOW-CITIZENS: I desire to address you very briefly on subjects connected with our present national difficulties. But it will not be necessary for me to attempt to retrace the history of the war. It is written in the memory and upon the hearts of all our people. I desire only to present to you some general views in relation to it, which will enable me better to explain and you better to understand the course which I have pursued as your representative for the last two years. During that whole period subjects of the deepest interest have engaged all minds and hearts, from the fireside of the humblest citizen to the halls of Congress and the council chambers of the President. By a clear understanding of this course of your representative, you will be able to determine for yourselves the propriety of his views. I have endeavored to perform my duty with a heart faithful to your rights and your honor, but you shall be the judges of my success.

I have changed no opinion, that I know of, during the varying circumstances and in the fearful necessities of this war. Men may well change their opinions when circumstances change as they have done so often during the past two years; and he is not a wise man, nor an expedient one, who does not employ circumstances and guide himself by them to some extent, always, however, being true to principle. I saw the size of this rebellion, but I could hardly realize the fact that civil war was to come in this fearful form upon us, nor could you. The idea was strange to the American mind, that treason or rebellion could exist against a Government so free and popular as ours. Who was there, we thought, to rebel against the people? In all other revolutions it is the people who have revolted against the Government; but here, it would seem, there could be no civil war or revolt, unless it was against the people themselves. But so it was. I did what I could to prevent it; and if the proposition I offered had been accepted, I think I might say with confidence there would have been no war, and I should have had the satisfaction of believing that I had done something in the way of saving my country from its greatest calamity; but that honor was not reserved for me, nor that blessing for my country. The compromise was rejected; the rebellion and the war followed. It was a rebellion without just cause; so I then thought and so I still think. The Administration up to that time, Mr. LINCOLN having been inaugurated, had done nothing of injustice to any section, or State, or individual. Throughout this great land no single individual could be pointed out, to whom the Government had done injustice; no man from whom the Government had taken property, or whose liberties had been encroached upon; no man who had been unjustly imprisoned.

Upon what, then, was the rebellion founded? LINCOLN had been elected, and with him came into power those who had elected him, principally from those who favored Abolition. Upon this single fact they founded an apprehension that the new President and new Administration, with the Congress elected, would use their power for the purpose of abolishing Slavery and despoiling them of their rights. Upon this apprehension they set to work to involve their country in the certain calamities of this tragic war. Was a mere apprehension a sufficient ground for such a proceeding? Is war, with all its calamities, to be resorted to because men apprehend some danger may come upon them? There ought to be the most solid and convincing reasons, and a certainty of actual mischief, in order to justify such a resort to arms. It is one of terror and desolation, of vice and crime of every sort; and before a resort to such a remedy they ought to know that danger was positively certain and the remedy sure. Apprehension was not sufficient. It was simply the apprehension that Congress might, in the course of its legislative action, abolish the institution of Slavery. What ground was there for such an apprehension? They could only imagine that it was the wish of a certain party to do what they feared. But that very party had engaged, in its platform upon which LINCOLN was elected, that the constitutional provision in regard to the right of Slavery in the Slave States should be recognized; that Slavery should not be interfered with by Congress. Another thing that rendered this apprehension unreasonable is this: if they (Southern Congressmen) had retained their seats, it would have been physically and mentally impossible for LINCOLN, and his friends in Congress, ever to have passed such a measure. [Applause.] Thus you see that, both constitutionally and naturally, there was an impossibility that the apprehension which they pretended to entertain should be realized.

No such danger could have approached them. But this apprehension was industriously circulated through the South, and the people were stirred up against the Government to such a degree that violence against it broke out, and from that day to this we have had the bloodiest, the saddest and greatest of all wars—the most momentous in its consequences, for on the result of this war hangs the stability of the greatest Government the world has known. It involves, to a mighty extent, the destiny of mankind, the liberty and welfare of the human race.

In the presence of these momentous consequences, I have endeavored to act in a manner worthy of my constituents, and worthy of my country. Of course I was for the war. What could be more just? Here was a rebellion raising its fratricidal hand against the Government—against the most peaceable, happy and prosperous people that the sun ever shone upon. In the midst of all our blessings, which were indicative of Heaven's high favor, as though recognizing the divinity of Free Government, suddenly there arises, not a foreign enemy, not an alien, jealous of our prosperity and greatness, but our own brethren arise, with arms in their hands, ready to tear us to pieces, and avowing their purpose to overthrow our Government and our liberties, and set us adrift again upon the wide ocean of experiment. Where could we ever hope to find a better Government? Where could we ever hope to find men more competent or true to the people than those who made this Government of ours? Who is to supply, in these latter days, the place of WASHINGTON, the place of MADISON, the place of JEFFERSON, the place of Chief-Justice MARSHALL, the place of ALEXANDER HAMILTON? Who shall supply the places of those mighty intellects? Are the demagogues of the present day equal to the task? They are ready to attempt it, and believe that. If you would give them a chance, they could, before another morning's sun, produce a constitution and form of government much better than that of WASHINGTON and the other great men of his time, who took weeks and months to perfect the one we inherited from them.

Now, how could I, a native-born Kentuckian, be otherwise than for the war to defend and preserve this glorious Government of ours against the rebellion? I was for the war, and have been a supporter of the war all the time. But I wanted to see nothing ignoble in this contest. I thought that a plain, straightforward, manly way would be the best in putting down the rebellion. I wanted no indirection. I looked upon it as a national contest, and desired to see all party feeling abandoned. It was a war of defence on your part. God had given you an inheritance greater than any vouchsafed to any other nation; and should you basely surrender it without a struggle, saying to the rebels, "take it and do as you please with it?" Teat would have been ignominious—the like of which was never heard of in history. It was for the preservation of our Government and our territory, and we should pursue it, regardless of cost and sacrifice. These were my sentiments, and I thought we should pursue the war as a national object, with no mean party scheming. I would have regarded any man who should attempt to divide the people on party questions as a malefactor, and treated him as such. Entertaining these views, yet with some apprehensions that, in the shock of war, there might be some revival of ancient party feeling that would lead to the use of this war for other purposes than that for which alone it ought to be prosecuted, the effect of which would be to divide our people, I offered a resolution, for the purpose of clearly defining the object of the war, to the end that neither Whigs, Abolitionists nor Democrats should divide from it for party purposes. Congress adopted this resolution by an unexampled majority. Thus the course of the war seemed to be marked out. It should not be prosecuted for the accomplishment of any sectional purpose, to subvert the interests of any State or the institutions of any of the States. They shall remain unmolested. The whole object of the war should be to reestablish the Constitution and the Union. To this course Congress was pledged, and I thought that I had done a good thing. Neither Abolitionists, Democrats, nor Whigs, should trouble us with the introduction of any of their peculiar claims. We had the nation to fight for, and not party dogmas.

But my resolution proved ineffective. My apprehensions that the shock of war might change the national feelings of Congress were verified. Still I was for the war. Notwithstanding the Confiscation act, notwithstanding the Emancipation Proclamation, and the Emancipation laws, notwithstanding the policy of raising negro armies, and the talk about negro equality with white men as soldiers—and I voted against them all—notwithstanding their adoption, I have still advocated the prosecution of the war. While the rebellion was before me, I was still for the war, without an armistice, regardless of foreign intervention—fighting all the world if necessary—till the rebellion is put down. I was dissatisfied with the policy of the Administration. I thought it my duty to tell Congress and the Government that we thought these measures were impolitic and unconstitutional. But, still, it was our duty to fight the rebellion; it was the greatest danger, and it was right in our faces. Our Constitution and laws might all be violated, or suspended; it would be of no use to stop to talk. After the war is over, the people may, in their wisdom, correct the errors and repair the mischief, and prevent further encroachments on the Constitution and their rights. This is my opinion, and I am free to express it, as I feel free to express every other sentiment or conviction of my mind.

I am, therefore, for the prosecution of the war until it shall have accomplished its end. To the dissolution of this Union, I never will subscribe. I am an old man, and could shuffle out the few remaining days of my life without being compelled to sanction a proposition for the dismemberment of the Union: but, notwithstanding, from principle, for the perpetuation of free Government, I would prosecute this war so long as there is a rebel in arms, threatening that Government, and threatening Kentucky especially. The rebel Government claims Kentucky as its own, because some of her recreant sons have gone off into its service. Yes, the rebels say, we will have Kentucky anyhow; it isn't worth while for her to struggle. You have, therefore, something more than a general interest in this war; you have a particular one. The South wants you; you have a rich country, and are prosperous; you can pay taxes; you are a soldierly, fighting people, and if they can conquer you, you may be made to serve them well. What Kentuckian will not say, the war shall be prosecuted to the last extremity by those who were born in "the land of fair women and brave men?" [Great cheers.] I tell you, the rebellion never shall, never can subjugate you, if you are determined they shall not. [Applause.]

Now, it is proposed by some, in their anger against the Government, for violating its pledge in that resolution to which I have referred, to resent it—by what? By refusing to fight the rebellion—by refusing to give money or men for the prosecution of the war. Will that better the matter? Will that course save you, and save our glorious country and Government? If you offer no resistance, you surrender to it, and lose your manhood. But if you fight it out, we can easily repair all the damage which the people, in their judgment, may think has been committed on the Constitution and the laws. I hope to live to see this done. I hope to see it done in a manner worthy of a great nation—not by a mob, or with any violence. I want to see it done in accordance with those forms of law that will give it dignity hereafter. A wise man must regulate and reconcile his duties, and discharge them all, in the best order he can. Admit that it is our duty to see that these encroachments upon our liberties are corrected, that no bad precedents may be left for justifying future encroachments. That is one duty. But here is the rebellion, with the sword uplifted; is it not our duty to save our country first, and then turn around and save the Constitution? [Great applause.] The measures to which I have alluded are obnoxious, but the rebellion is more so. [Still greater applause.]

My countrymen, the great issue, and the greatest issue that the events of this world ever brought about, is the preservation of the country entire. You have the greatest country and the greatest government the world ever saw in a country, springing up in a manner that astonishes and awes the civilized world; and to put down this rebellion is necessary to its preservation. Shall we do it? Shall we, the sons of revolutionary sires, shrink from a war, even with our own brethren, when it is necessary, in order to maintain our rights, our liberties and our country? I want to make no opposition to these measures, obnoxious as they are, inconsistent with my hostility and determination to overthrow the rebellion. That comes first, and must receive immediate attention. I am not a man that has ever indulged in clamors and seditious policy; I am not a man to give way to virulent, personal feelings; I have never forgotten proper decorum toward those in authority. The President I believe to be a most well-meaning and excellent man; and it is not by denouncing his views, it is not by the language of passion and reproach that errors in public affairs can be righted, and the government conducted successfully. Neither on this nor any other occasion has it been my habit to make an outcry and clamor; but, when usurpations of power are made dangerous, and when encroachment upon my liberty and the liberty of my constituents, and upon the Constitution intended to guard the liberties of us all, are made, I would have every man have spirit enough to declare his opinions and offer his protests. Without this freedom of speech there can be no lasting liberty; the Republic cannot exist. If every man should close his lips, and not venture even a word against violated rights, who could maintain free Government? Nobody. A people who cannot discuss the public measures of the nation, and apply the necessary rebuke to secure correction of wrongs, cannot be a free people, and do not deserve to be. But it is not necessary that it be done with passion. You are a portion of the people of the United States; act in a manner becoming your high character. Sedition does not become it; clamor does not become it. Action, at the proper time, and in the proper manner, according to legal and constitutional provision, is what we want, and what the world has a right to expect.

The question now before us is simply this: Are you for the country and the Government? I am. As for the little party scheming about emancipation and negro equality, I am opposed to it. But still I am for the war, since the war is clearly necessary to save the country and the Constitution, in which and under which alone these errors can be corrected. This war was unexpected; it was a new subject for the thoughts of our people. Who could see his way clear through this night of storm? The wisest man could only feel and cautiously plan, and step by step. He had a Union to save, and it became him to move cautiously; and he who, under such circumstances, would give way to his own personal presumption and folly, and endeavor to make use of the great catastrophe to accomplish little party or sectional purpose, comes far short of his duty. I have endeavored to avoid this weakness; how far I have succeeded you, my friends, must be the judges.

I have no anxiety about returning to Congress. I would not sacrifice a hair's breadth of any of the opinions I have given you for a dozen seats in Congress. I am too much of a Kentuckian, and have seen too much of Congress for that. In pursuance of these principles, I voted against the bill for enrolling the militia. When it was called up on its passage, I asked, is it the intention of this bill to require that the slaves of my constituents shall be enrolled in the militia, and that free negroes shall thus be enrolled also? That seemed to be the intention of the bill; and an amendment was offered, that under the provisions of this law, free negroes and slaves should not be enrolled. The amendment failed, and I voted against the bill. [Applause.] I wanted the whole power of the country employed to put down the rebellion; what is the whole power of the country? Whose country is it? Whose Government is it? Is it not the white man's country, the white man's Government? [Great applause.] It is the white man who boasts of his liberty and of his free Government, and is he to shrink from defending it, and call in his slaves to assist him? Shall the liberties of this great country be dependent on slavery for their preservation? I turn with scorn from the idea. [Cheers.]

I am not without sympathy for these people. I believe there is more affection for the black man in Kentucky than in the whole of New-England; not that I believe the people of New-England are hypocrites about Slavery. They are more fanatical than you are, but you have more real kindness toward the blacks. You will shake hands with the old negro more cordially, and give him greater comfort than those people who have never been accustomed to his ways. This is the result of the force of habit and of association, but the advantage is real. But what white man is there who is willing to make himself an equal with the negro—to stand side by side with him in the daily walks of life—to sleep with him—to shed his blood with him as an equal in the battle for our country? No, Sir; I believe the white man is a superior race, and I will not be the man to let our race down, or, what is the same thing, raise up an inferior race to an equality with him. Never! I will endeavor to make my countrymen believe to the last—for it is a glorious delusion, if it is not a fact—that this race of ours is the greatest and noblest people on earth. The belief, at least, will go far to make them such. I don't want any negro armies to help to save our country. What brave old Kentucky father could half with triumph the return of his son from the war, if that son should say, "Oh, but father, I had a negro to go before me, and when a shot came he had to take it." Such ignominious patriotism no noble-hearted father could take pride in. I would rather see our young men brought home corpses, than see them saved by such unsoldierlike means. It would leave no wreath on the patriot brow. What more glorious conduct than to fight for one's country when necessity demands it? And if we who claim it as our own are not sufficient for the contest, or basely throw it upon our slaves, do we not show ourselves unworthy of the great boon? What a disgrace would it be to have history record that we and our children enjoy the liberty saved from destruction by the hands of our slaves? A few more of our sons might die on the battle-field, but more of them would live in imperishable glory hereafter.

Again, when one of the military appropriation bills came up, a proposition was made that none of the money appropriated by the act should be applied to raising negro regiments, or to pay for the emancipation of slaves. They would not allow a vote upon the proposition, and because of this I retained my vote. I did not want to vote against it, because it made appropriations for the war, and I did not want to vote for it, because the majority refused to agree that no part of the money should be applied to pay for negroes.

I believe I have thus given the general principles which guided my conduct during the last Congress, as your representative. When I came home from Washington this Spring, it was with no expectation or wish to return. I cherished the desire that the remnant of my life might be devoted to quiet and Christian reflections and associations. But I have permitted myself, against much opposition on my part, to be persuaded that it was the wish of the people that I, having been so long in Congress, and being so familiar with the great questions connected with the welfare of the nation, should represent them yet another term in consideration of the time of great trial which is upon us.

In conclusion let me say, that it is our interest to bring this war to a conclusion as soon as possible. My chief objection to the obnoxious measures of the Administration is to, that they exasperate the enemy, and tend to prolong the war; not that the rebels do not deserve the penalties they impose, for they have made themselves richly deserving of them all; but it was to our interest to bring the war to a speedy and satisfactory conclusion. But, let us fight through it as best we can. The enemy challenges us; he is in our way; he stands before us defying us with all the boldness of the Philistines of old, and especially defying you Kentuckians, and proclaiming his determination to make you his spoil. Will you hesitate what course to pursue? I don't make war upon the South because I hate the South. It is not from any personal feeling against the South, but it is because I condemn their conduct and hate the principles they are endeavoring to carry out. I don't love the South the less, but I love my country more. My hostility is the result of principle, which is the same, morning, noon and evening—in the morning of the year, and at the noon and evening of every year. The mere politician says he is angry with the South; but there is nothing reliable in anger; it is passion, and may change any hour or day, and be against you when you think it will be for you.

The nation will get through its difficulties. We have the power and the will to do it, and we shall accomplish it. The great Providence that has made us the standard-bearer of freedom, will not permit our Government to go down and leave the world in gloom. I have faith; "there is a Divinity above that shapes all our ends," and He will shape the destiny of our nation. Its career has only just begun, and Providence does not permit a half-finished work of such momentous proportions to fall and be abandoned; and I trust in God, that we, the people, do not intend it. Our hearts must be filled with the noble determination to maintain the integrity of our Government, while we grow greater and greater, mightier and mightier, richer in civilization, grander in prosperity, until our glory shall cover the whole land.

But you must prepare to fight the rebellion through to the last, no matter whether England or France or any other Power, make common cause with them or not. We must fight them all, if need be; we can whip them all in defence of right. I don't want to extend the boundaries of this war; God knows I do not. I have tried to make peace, as long as peace was consistent with national safety. Now, I believe, war alone can save us, and war it must be. England is not our friend in this contest. I care not how softly she may condole with us on the calamities of war. Let me tell you this solemn truth: both England and France want your country divided; both of them are witnesses to you how important it is to you that it shall not be divided. They want it divided in order to weaken you, that by weakening they may conquer you. They want to Europeanize all America. France is trying to do it now in a portion of the continent. But they are a little afraid. There are a million of freemen in arms, and a million more ready to spring to the defence of the nation against a foreign foe. [A voice, with a well known brogue—"And all Ireland is ready, too!" Great and continued applause.] That is true. Let England and France make a hostile movement, and the hearts of our people will be roused. It will no longer be a contest between brethren. The sight of a foreign foe will kindle a fire of patriotism that will rouse the nation to a just sense of its danger; and we will beat off the combined forces as easily as we now hold the rebels in check.

And when our erring brethren shall come back, when this war is over, we will endeavor, as a matter of policy, and for humanity's sake, to treat it as a family feud. We will make reconciliation as far as possible. We will endeavor to forgive and forget on all sides the wounds and disasters that have fallen upon us. And this nation will take a new start. We shall be a wiser people. We shall know what it is to rebel. We will know that it is no holiday frolic; no mere beating of drums and firing of blank cartridges. Our Southern brethren seem to think that there was no more harm in rebellion than in going to church. It was merely a turning to the right or to the left. But they have found out their mistake. They now know what it is to have civil war, and we will have no more rebellions after this one is disposed of. We shall go on in our grand march, prospering and to prosper. I look forward to peace—to a successful termination of this war, which will secure a reliable peace, and as is now the prospect. Whether HOOKER has recrossed the Rappahannock or not; whether Richmond is taken or not; whether in defeat or victory, my determination is to stand by and maintain the Government, and do all I can to promote a vigorous prosecution of the war.

This happy close of the speech was received with most unbounded applause.

THE CASE OF MR. VALLANDIGHAM.

Judge Leavitt's Decision.

The Cincinnati papers publish Judge LEAVITT'S decision in the Vallandigham habeas corpus case.

After a general statement of the case, the Judge remarked that the doctrine was well established, that the writ could not issue of course, but only on sufficient ground shown.

The ground for the application was that Mr. VALLANDIGHAM was not in the military or naval service, and was consequently not amenable to the military authority and the constitutional provisions for the protection of liberty were read by counsel, and commented upon at length. "But," says the Judge, "the Court cannot shut its eyes to the grave fact that war exists, involving the most imminent public danger, and threatening the subversion and destruction of the Constitution itself. In my judgment, when the life of the Republic is imperiled, he mistakes his duty and obligations as a patriot who is not willing to concede to the Constitution such a capacity of adaptation to circumstances as may be necessary to meet a great emergency, and save the nation from helpless ruin.

"Self-preservation is a paramount law, which a nation, as well as an individual, may find it necessary to invoke."

Our fathers, the Judge declares, foreseeing the result of ambitious schemes for aggrandizement, provided for just such an emergency as the present by granting Congress power to raise and support armies, and to create a navy. When they made these grants they were aware of the magnitude of the powers conferred in order to give the clauses effect. The rebellion of 1795 called for the enactment of a law in pursuance of these provisions of the Constitution, and it was enacted. It was under this statute that the President issued his call for volunteers after the bombardment of Fort Sumter.

"It is not to be disguised," he says, "that the country is in imminent danger, and that the crisis demands of every American citizen a hearty support of all proper measures for the restoration of the Union and the return of an honorable peace. * * The President may not be the man of our choice, and his measures not be such as all can fully approve; but these are minor considerations, and excuse no one from the paramount obligation of lending his aid to the salvation of the country. All should remember that no evil is so great as disunion."

And again, "It is clearly no time for any one connected with the judicial department of the Government to allow himself, except from the most stringent obligations of duty, to thwart the execution in his efforts to deliver the country from the dangers which press so heavily upon it." If Gen. BURNSIDE has exceeded his authority, it is the duty of the President to apply the remedy. The President, being Commander-in-Chief of the army, must judge of the military necessity. He is responsible to the country for a violation of his duties, and can be impeached.

The power of the President undoubtedly implies the right to arrest persons who are mischievous and disloyal, thereby endangering the existence of the Government, and the success of the army; and possessing it, he can delegate it to the Commander of a Department.

Martial law is defined to be "the will of the military commander, operating without restraint, save his own judgment, upon the entire social and individual condition of the people." To the objection that no proclamation of martial law had been issued, it need only be said that no such thing is necessary.

After eulogizing the capacity and integrity of Gen. BURNSIDE, the Judge adds: "Artful and designing politicians, disguising their latent treason under hollow pretences of devotion to the Union, were striving to disseminate their pestilential heresies among the masses of the people. The evil was one of alarming magnitude, and threatened seriously to impede the military operations of the Government, and greatly protract the war." It was with this fact before him that Gen. BURNSIDE promptly issued his famous Order No. 38, which had been brought to the notice of the court.

He would not dwell further upon it, and only referred to it because Gen. BURNSIDE, in his manly and patriotic letter to the Court, gave his reason at length for issuing it. In the judgment of the Commanding General it was necessary, and it was not for the Judiciary to reverse it. The legality of the arrest depends upon the extent of the necessity for making it, and that was to be determined by the military commander.

And here, without subjecting myself to the charge of touching upon the domain of political discussion, I may be indulged in the remark that there is too much of the pestilential leaven of disloyalty in the community. There is a class of men in the loyal States who seem to have no just appreciation of the deep criminality of those who are in arms avowedly for the overthrow of the Government, and the establishment of a Southern Confederacy. They have not, I fear, risen to any right estimate of their duties and obligations, as American citizens, to a Government which has strewn its blessings with a profuse hand.

Then, after characterizing the rebellion as altogether unjustifiable, the Judge proceeded:

"It may be assumed, I trust, that in most of the Northern States reliable and unswerving patriotism is the rule, and disloyalty and treason the exception. But there should be no division of sentiment upon this momentous subject. Men should know, and lay the truth to heart, that there is a course of conduct not involving overt treason, and not, therefore, subject to punishment as such, which, nevertheless, implies moral guilt, and a gross offence against the country. Those who live under the protection and enjoy the blessings of our benignant Government, must learn that they cannot stab its vitals with impunity. If they cherish hatred and hostility to it, and desire its subversion, let them withdraw from its jurisdiction, and seek the fellowship and protection of those with whom they are in sympathy. If they remain with us, while they are not of us, they must be subject to such a course of dealing as the great law of self-preservation prescribes and will enforce. And let them not complain if the stringent doctrine of military necessity should find them to be the legitimate subjects of its action. I have no fears that the recognition of this doctrine will lead to an arbitrary invasion of the personal security or personal liberty of the citizen. It is rare, indeed, that a charge of disloyalty will be made upon insufficient grounds.

But if there should be an occasional mistake, such an occurrence is not to be put in competition with the preservation of the nation, and I confess I am but little moved by the eloquent appeals of those who, while they indignantly denounce violation of personal liberty, look with no horror upon a despotism as unmitigated as the world has ever witnessed. But I cannot pursue this subject further. I am aware there are points made by the learned counsel representing Mr. VALLANDIGHAM, to which I have not adverted. I have had neither time nor strength for a more elaborate consideration of the questions involved in this application.

For the reasons which I have attempted to set forth, I am led clearly to the conclusion that I cannot judicially pronounce the order of Gen. BURNSIDE for the arrest of Mr. VALLANDIGHAM as a nullity, and must, therefore, hold that no sufficient ground has been exhibited for granting the writ applied for. And I may properly add here, that I am fortified in my conclusion by the fact just brought to my notice, that the Legislature of Ohio, at its late session, has passed two statutes, in which the legality and validity of arrests in the State, under military authority, are distinctly sanctioned. This is a clear indication of the opinion of that body, that the rights and liberties of the people are not put in jeopardy by the exercise of the power in question; and is, moreover, a concession that the present state of the country requires and justifies its exercise. It is a clear intimation that the people of our patriotic State will sanction such a construction of the Constitution as, without a clear violation of the letter, will adapt it to the existing emergency.

There is one other consideration to which I may, perhaps, properly refer, not as a reason for refusing the writ applied for, but for the purpose of saying that if granted there is no probability that it would be available in relieving Mr. VALLANDIGHAM from his present position. It is at least morally certain it would not be obeyed. And I confess I am somewhat reluctant to authorize a process knowing it would not be respected, and that the Court is powerless to enforce obedience; yet, if satisfied there were sufficient grounds for the allowance of the writ, the consideration to which I have adverted, would not be conclusive against it.

For these reasons, the writ is not allowed."

BROOKLYN NEWS.

THE DANGER OF INTRUSTING FIREARMS TO BOYS.—Yesterday afternoon, about 4½ o'clock, a boy discharged a loaded swivel in Wythe-avenue, Williamsburgh, the contents of which entered a window and passed through a room in which nine persons were congregated—none of whom, fortunately, were hurt. The ball passed within two inches of the head of a lady seated at the window, who had changed her position just in time to escape it.

SENTENCE OF THE BURGLAR GRANT.—CHARLES H. GRANT, otherwise known as CHARLES H. GORDON, who heretofore pleaded guilty of burglary in the first degree, was arraigned before the Kings County Court of Sessions yesterday morning for sentence. He was neatly dressed, and presented the same calm and self-possessed demeanor that he did when previously brought before the Court. The Judge, on passing sentence, reminded him of the numerous burglaries he had committed, and of the power of the Court to send him to State Prison for life, but in consequence of his youth the full term would not be imposed. He was thereupon sentenced to State Prison for twenty years. In answer to the usual questions the prisoner stated that he was born in Scotland, was 25 years of age, a civil engineer by profession, and had been in State Prison before, in Louisiana. The fact that he was guilty of perpetrating numerous robberies in New-Orleans previous to his advent in Brooklyn last Winter is proven by documents in possession of Inspector FOLK, received from the Chief of Police of New-Orleans. The account of his transactions in that city fill seventeen pages of foolscap. The extent of his robberies in Brooklyn, as far as traced by the officers, amounted to between $35,000 and $40,000. Twelve indictments were found against him, but he was permitted to plead guilty to one only.

THE BROOKLYN PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.—The annual statement of the Brooklyn Philharmonic Society for the past year shows that it now has 793 members and 158 professional subscribers. Five concerts have been given during the past season. The receipts from all sources were $7,813 03; disbursements, $7,440 63, leaving a balance of $372 40 on hand.
